University
2nd Semester
Virtual Reality

This semester I'm going to make an app for the iPhone, which will be a virtual reality based type app, where you can register via Facebook, pull up your camera, place objects in the real world, then share them with friends, for them to see using the app, when they turn up in that location where you placed them. Objects will include text, images and maybe videos.

Eventually Facebook will make their own version of this, which I look forward to also using and giving feedback for. I just seen this as an opportunity to test myself and make something pretty awesome. If I'm really happy with the app on completion, I will promote it on the App Store and develop a version for both Android and Windows.

Let the challenge begin...

Web
Portfolio
Famojy

This year I developed the website www.Famojy.com and helped shape how it should work. Check it out, register, login and create your own character!

It's a character creator website, where you can create the characters in your family and then create a family of characters which can be placed on the products in the store, ready for print.

I worked alongside two other developers, where I developed the interface, where another developer produced all the art work and another who helped plug the login and database.

As I've never done a character creator type website before, this was a new challenge, one which I was willing to get stuck in and master. It certainly deserves a place in my portfolio and I'm proud of the work that I've done.

On to the next project...

We might blame facebook and other social networks for mental health and suicide, but at the end of the day, we should praise the network which allows people to express how they feel, which allows people to feel connected, where they are more likely to get the right help they need.

Either way, people will express their thoughts, through whatever medium or offline, so what we need to do now, is ensure people know that if they express such thoughts and feelings, that we're not going to have a go at them, but actually help them to get back in the right direction.

To be fair, there are underlining issues which people are dealing with, do we have to blame social media, when social media isn't the cause, but a realisation that many people are going through their own battles in life. Governments use it, businesses use it and people use it and the truth is everyone could use it better, that's all, just like the land we walk on.

We shouldn't silence the world, just because it wants to express, connect and improve. We should not blame people for their problems. We should understand ones life like they've seen the worst, so we can be sympathetic and supportive, to ensure all of us come out of the storm, together.

Very noble of you William to carry out your mothers life long work and make the most of your position.

I admire your ability to seek for celebrities to work alongside you on this project, however, I think you need ordinary people from various cities across the UK to form feedback groups to support this charity, a bit like you have in a school, where you have form representatives who represent their form/area.

It's time we make a new era of celebrities, celebrities who aren't after the fame or money, celebrities who actually care about their impact and deliverance, celebrities who will support this charity to the end, regardless of obstacles or money.

It's the people who are struggling who you need to approach, to give them the opportunity to express, the opportunity to improve and the opportunity to become a leader in their community. Just meeting someone like you once, can open many doors in the future, a story to tell.

You don't need a script, you don't need a written plan, you don't need money, you just need the ability to share your vision and do it.

24 Jan 2019, 14:34

Sunny Claire updated his status.

To Heads Together, I'd like to give some feedback which should help the way people take help online, in regards to mental health.

Whenever I've seen a get help, ring number or support mechanism online when I've been feeling sad, I feel reluctant to take the help, because I'm unsure about how it's going to go and sometimes feel talking about it to someone isn't going to help.

Therefore these mechanisms which people come across, should be inviting and clear about how the process works, like a transparent experience, almost like you'd message a friend, where you know where you're going and what you're going to get in return.

I think this practice should be adopted across all websites, to an international standard. So whenever you visit any website which offers such support, then you will be familiar with the process, understand the help available and comfortable in taking the help.

Upon making an international standard in all languages, then companies such as Facebook can add the plugin, where their previous mechanism was, so if you're on a search engine, you'd get the same experience across the board.

I'd love to help build this mental health plugin with other people interested in supporting our communities. After all, heads together?

I've noticed lots of things that need improving and would like to discuss these at interview, amongst many other great things I've done for facebook so far. Thanks, Sunny.

I can see all the dynamics in play at facebook and it's a privilege to suggest an improvement and then know that many millions will benefit from that suggestion. Share now for example was a suggestion of mine, thanks to the developers for taking my feedback thus far, you own and make that feedback into something.

One of the greatest things that facebook allows you to do, is go out there and influence the world in a respectful manner and make a living from doing so if you really want... I think that's what businesses and governments don't like, that anyone can go out there and just make it now and use social media to their advantage! The pressure appears to be directive at facebook politically, when facebook is doing more than most companies to make it a safe place for people to connect. At the end of the day, keeping in the loop is more likely to help you stay in with the times, facebook can be a really great lifestyle tool...

I could never say anything bad about facebook, when I was its biggest critic, feedback designer and member. The demand was there, people wanted to use it. When the naysayers said I could never get a job at facebook, I always said yes I can and I knew why, because I kept building upon my portfolio and seeing the opportunity to help improve the way the world navigates.

I've already had an impact at facebook and look forward to seeing where you would like me to fit in... Remote designers flying across the world, participating in talks, opening new ways for interaction, bringing more people together, designing our world, doing so many great things to enhance humanity.

I know what every single person does in this country, nevermind the wider world. I know why people make good and bad decisions, I know why people struggle, I know why people put their struggles to one side, I know why the way everyone thinks and operates.

I see that most people try to make the most of the situation that they are in, to keep moving in life. I just know what everyone is going through in a single snapshot each day, it's a vision of reality, people have lives to lead, where they must lose sight of the storm and focus on the victory.

I just know that a few million people in this country want the opportunities most get, I know how they feel to this world's cold hearted rejection, I know how money implicates their health, I know how lack of work affects their mental well being, I know if they could live a better life, then they would, but instead, they are making do with a troubling care and career system, which implicates everything they do.

I just know, because I keep in touch with reality, I like to keep in with the times and I like to learn about how our country operates.

If we attack facebook, then we should look at every media company on the web, including YouTube. The government just don't want to accept the realities of the world today and people's demands in using technology. It's a shame all big networks harbour many hidden monsters which can change the way people think and operate. We must continue moving towards an educational approach, to help humanity understand how to use media networks safely. Do the government really know what is on the internet? It's quite worrying they act like they don't, when they do.

15 years of facebook and we've seen the service we use, grow, break and then strengthen. When people have the ability to come together, then great things can potentially happen. Facebook simply allows you to document your experiences, it allows the people in your life to follow your journey, and it allows you to stay in with the times through the power of connect.

I'm proud to of used the facebook network over the last 11 years, where my first 5 years of usage were more so lifestyle related and the remaining was a mix of lifestyle and work in recent years. As much as I want to revert to a strict lifestyle type profile, I also like the capabilities of documenting my digital work. Today, your profile can be much more than a lifestyle tool, it can also be used for work, whether you want to discuss mental health or talk about a business you want to setup, you will get more traction and support versus the traditional methods. That's right, we've told the world, we've gone digital!

Thanks to the team at facebook who have supported the founder's commitment in connecting the world each and every day. We have so much more to work on! Understand the network, harness your time and enjoy life! I look forward to continuing my work for facebook.

If they can cause tensions, divides or confusion, they can capitalise on this opportunity to put themselves ahead, disregarding any damage they've caused and doing everything to bring the focus back to them, acting like they are innocent and rightful, when in reality we know the truth they could never hide.

Thankfully this is the digital age, where we can constructively connect in building better communities and well being. Tensions, divides and confusion is not healthy for anyone.

- ▲ Research contributing factors
- ▲ Understand the service users
- ▲ Align the design to the business mission
- ▲ Create web pages from the text editor
- ▲ Design almost anything in the web page
- ▲ Enforce universal & responsive design
- ▲ Manipulate every pixel in the page
- ▲ Exercise incremental development
- ▲ Influence the user experience
- ▲ Provide structured navigation
- ▲ Identify problems and solutions
- ▲ Measure the user's movements
- ▲ Develop animating features
- ▲ Connect & interact with data
- ▲ Show early previews
- ▲ Link to other systems
- ▲ Oversee hosting usage

- ▲ Produce art & symbols
- ▲ Control SEO & Meta
- ▲ Incorporate plugins
- ▲ Make road maps
- ▲ Learn quick

Although I do have experience in developing databases, which connects to the login system & stores the user data, I prefer to outsource someone who is more experienced in this work, who can utilise on efficiency of the database requests and provide better scaling for future developments. I recently worked alongside a web database developer, who managed to design and connect a database to a character creator website I made, which led to the completion of it to a high standard.

I know I can't do it all, but I know how everything works in theory and I'm eager to learn even more. My fascination in knowing how things work, allows me to learn more and put more creativity in my work.

Industries will do anything to keep operating and will do anything to oppose the consequences of their products. Whether it is violent games or whether it is gambling products, we can't deny the affects these types of products have on both children & adults, including the marketing of these products.

The truth is that everything has an affect, including social media, the news, the politicians, role models, you name it, it has an affect on everyone.

I've always stood firm to that you should be able to do anything, considering you're responsible about what you do and that you do things in moderation. We must continue to address these issues, find better ways to protect people and become advocates in supporting better well being through these journeys in life.

These were experiences designed to provide a fun environment for the typical person initially, which have then been reshaped to gain more interaction, more profit and potentially more vulnerable people in recent years.

It's so important to exercise variety and have a varied lifestyle, because if you don't, then you will more than likely develop a problem with the addicting designs we experience.

Social media is the gateway to freedom of speech. Social media allows people to document real life experiences and share them with people interested in learning more. Social media is our world book, where we can add milestones in real time and contribute to our world.

Like with anything, social media is open to manipulation, just like the streets, where we still don't do enough to protect our most vulnerable. The difference between the streets and social media, is that on social media, experiences are recorded, whereas the streets don't have this safeguard. I personally think the streets can be more dangerous than the digital world, although you have bad actors in both.

Education has gone a long way in recent years and is the foundation to all existence. We can learn from home, we can browse the internet, we can go to the library, we can explore the world, we can ask questions, we can bring heads together, we can collaborate, we can interrogate and we can learn at any given time.

When we learn, we learn how to teach, we learn how to recycle, we learn how to pass on our knowledge and we learn the importance of education.

Knowledge is everything and we must use today's knowledge to help shape the future for tomorrow's children, because without the support and creation of new jobs for the people of today, the children of tomorrow will pay the price, during this uncertain economical time.

Designer--- We don't build things to last anymore, we build things to break & our governments are responsible for letting these companies act in this way for so long, without any repercussions or enforcing better design practices.

Indeed people need things, but if we think creating legislation to enforce recycling is going to do the trick, then we're wrong, totally wrong. I see this as an opportunity for businesses to capitalise on our governments relaxed measures, to solely make money over better products.

In the end, the consumer pays the price. It shouldn't be this way. Nor should poor countries take our shit, because we know we can get rid of it, for next to nothing. Companies are the only profiteers of our products breaking, not you the consumer, not the government, not the countries taking our waste, not the world.

By now you'd expect any product we make to last 100 years, but the truth is that it probably lasts a year or two on purpose. At least once it has done its life cycle, then it should be at least 100% recyclable.

But check it out when you have 2 minutes and don't worry, I've prevented the web page from being indexed in search engines etc. And if you'd prefer me to take it offline, then I will comply with you. Hope you like the look and note, I've sent you an email, which outlines anything can be done! Keep hunting!

Want to learn more about your city? See exactly how many people are employed, amongst many other interesting statistics via the following link. It will open your eyes --- I'm surprised we don't teach these at a curriculum level and allow our children to become interested in these facts, to help them see how their city/country operates and how they can fit in and play their role.

Example: Using some simple maths, if we planned on bringing everyone who can work out of unemployment, then it would cost roughly £37.5b for 1.5m jobs at £25,000 - which in turn, would bring back approximately £10b in taxes if not more in the long run, boost the economy, reduce strain on existing services and improve our country in the long run. Say we invest £3500m into infrastructure and equipment each year, then an overall cost of £40b vs our country's £800b yearly expenditure, is a small cost, versus the benefits it will indefinitely bring to our country. Eventually people will shift from government roles to business roles, as they gain experience and want to move on in their career, allowing new people to have opportunities. This should be a programme, not for employed people, but unemployed people only. If we scrapped the Social Exclusion programme, it would pay for 1.5m jobs straight away.

So many people will sue for being subject to unfair practices in time and now it is all digital and recoverable in today's time.

Technology will help people realise mass projected issues quicker and it will bring people together, especially on social media, to combat any bad actors. We're only starting to embrace this avenue.

They can't hide or change evidence in the digital age, they can only prolong inevitable justice or try and tamper with evidence, if they have the tools, in this new world open network, where everything is logged, to protect one another equally. Forza Motorsport would you like to work on a new project, helping improve the road and our drivers across the world, through tactical manoeuvres? I'm being serious, we could save lives.

Although the roads are designed to perfection for the safe driver, it's full of problems which need addressing today and improving for the typical driver.

The safe driver surrounds oneself in safety and senses everything by second nature. The safe driver puts trust in drivers around one and ensures that safety is echoed wherever one goes.

Forza Horizon Safe - could be a free game simulator, which encompasses our real roads, allows people to learn how to drive theoretically and physically. Forza can capitalise through in game adverts and in return, help us understand our roads better and allow people to submit feedback, based on problems people address and submit.

<https://www.marketwatch.com/story/harry-potter-at-20-how-jk-rowling-went-from-welfare-to-wizards-2017-06-26>

You see the thing with the welfare system, it makes you think that you can't go and break and make the scene, if you're claiming for example, however there's tons of examples of people out there, who've made it from the streets, who were claiming whilst doing their dream work. If they are allowed to do it, then so are you.

JK Rowling is a great example, who went on to write the famous Harry Potter, the world knows today. If she didn't have the support of our government, if she didn't have the opportunity to exercise her skills in her area, then Harry Potter never would of been.

It's clear that, it's the most important time in your career, when you're on the welfare system, it's the most important time when you can ask for help in your career and it's the most important time in your life. It definitely feels like a dull experience to careers, however it is what you make of it, not what they don't do for you.

What appears to be the same about the welfare system from then to now, is that we haven't managed to develop a world class career service, because I honestly don't see one and would like to play a role in the future, making sure the UK has a world class career service, for everyone in this country and the wider world.

JK Rowling - "I couldn't have written this book if I hadn't had a few years where I'd been really as poor as it's possible to go in the UK without being homeless," Rowling said in 2012. "We were on welfare, what we call welfare, I would call benefits, for a couple years."

Don't ever let the world make you feel like you how to follow a script. Just because the welfare system is set in stone, doesn't mean your agendas or future has to be.

Everyone is a vital asset to the world; we can't do it without your presence; the world only operates at this scale with open opportunities and cooperation. At times, people think they can do it all by themselves, but in reality, we rely on everyone, at all levels of the social chain. The rich will never be rich without the poor and it's the rich's obligation to help the poor.

The world needs to act as one, as humanity, where phobia's towards races isn't a thing. We teach our kids this when they are children and most of us do our best to ensure our kids know this, however when they grow up into their teenage years, they can be subject to confusion and bad actors in the world, who can steer their way of thinking, which can potentially affect them in their early or later years.

We have to interrogate the system which governs us, to understand why people do such things in the world, to make sure it doesn't happen again.

Only great change is in order, a new world way of thinking, where we educate this at every possible level, to ensure we eradicate all malicious and radical ways of thinking.

It's clear, time and time again, minorities who disrupt in this way, have a major impact across the whole world. It's clear they need a way out of this thinking, a way to release their upset in more productive ways and to remind them, they are not the only ones who are subject to radical thoughts.

It's not going to disappear anytime soon, unless war stops across the world, unless borders are broken down, unless people are brought together positively, unless people are educated that humanity is one and that there are ways to escape deep demons we are fully aware of, at every level.

Given the world today, it's completely understandable why people can go off the radar and go and do bad things, but it's not understandable why we don't do enough, to ensure it doesn't happen again, like ever. You know, there's 200 million unemployed people across the world, probably more and this figure hasn't changed over the last 10 years --- we need to ensure people have safer environments and life changing opportunities, to help them feel a part of the community, our world. Everyone needs to know they are a vital asset to the world, to make them feel important, to make them realise they have so much and to enforce a better world, with them at the heart of it.

Every country, every city, every town, needs the core infrastructure, to ensure people can move in the right direction, opposed to the negative doom and gloom which hangs above all our heads, across the world.

When you grow up, you begin to see this more and it becomes an integral part of life. It's something you do by second nature, without having to think; it's a sense of influence, it's a gift, given by god.

My; World; Speech

I'm no speaker, I'm no genius, I'm no great, I'm not the best, I'm not perfect, I'm not amazing, even though my friends and family think I am. I'm a reflection of you, I'm here for the same reason as you and I want to be here for all of you.

The world is a changing place, throughout the generations, our lifestyles and needs change and the way we should approach change, needs to ensure every one of us, has a role, a sense of importance, a way to work together, so we can always respect and protect humanity, as one.

A world governed by values, allows us to build upon this framework, stage by stage, given god gives us the chance to excel and bring opinions, ideas and a new sense of direction to the table. We've got to ensure people know this, that they can be an important factor in helping improve the world, however little or much energy they deliver.

Today, people understandably fight for their own survival as a priority first basis and this movement needs to change, before we allow money to destroy every area humanity touches; we need to put all of the conflicting past behind us and find ways to build indestructible bridges and make way for a world which has a future, ten, twenty, thirty generations ahead, because otherwise, what are we really working for today, for humanity to breakdown, where the people of our future show remorse for our generations and wipe us from living history, like we never existed or came before them. We've seen history been wiped out before in this way, through war and politics and why should our future generations want to remember the past where we could of done something about it, but didn't and ended up causing more misery than good, during the most technological era, but socially disconnected time in history. We can't allow this and we've got to come together, before money and political divides well and truly prevents world resolution.

If we are one, then why don't we act as one and why do we clearly leave people out; it's not just me, it's not just the doctor up the road, it's not just those kids in war stricken zones, it's everyone who is feeling the affects of this great world divide, although we undoubtedly express we are trying our best, whether we are or not; everyone knows we can do so much better, as one, humanity.

I'm not doing or saying anything new, I'm just reinforcing what most people think or may of have said in the past, for the people of today and tomorrow. I'm writing things people think, but don't get a chance to write.

It is packed full of mystery and wonder, where you can become defined in what interests you. It is good for your health and longevity, to see new days ahead, where you seek to do and experience the adventurous world with your friends and family. Even god embraces variety, where our journey is limitless and unwritten, until we can moderately do no more. And when we can do no more, god will give us a new lease of life and energy, to keep powering on, regardless of our position in time. God wants us to live our best life through the variety of resources and energy god has given us. We have got to respect and treasure this great gift, which allows us to do and become more. Even god sees the journey as 1% complete, just like facebook know it is the start of our world book, to new memories. Your history is everything, whether you want to hold onto some parts of it or not. It's a true picture of who you've become and why you've become the person you are today.

When you become an adult, you tend to want to forget the things which didn't help you, but in reality, whether the experience is good or bad, the experience made you more today, more stronger, more wiser and more ready for what the future has to bring, because the journey is not over and there's so much more to endure and how you endure it, depends on what you've already been through.

You may be told you're certain things, but at the end of the day, what matters more, is what you think, through the tests and judgements that people who are irrelevant to you may try to push upon you. What matters more, is how you use your strength to propel you, not the bad experiences which made it harder for you, despite the learning curves you encountered through them; lets focus on the positive, in everything we do, say and be.

You don't have to delegate yourself to other people's bad ways or sacrifice your life for them. Stay true, succeed and live the best life you can. When world politics reunites and the majorities start working together, we will see greater changes, success and health. That needs to be our focus, where we help everyone out of hardship, troublesome times and political chaos, regardless of the challenges ahead.

If you dodge politics, avoid political discussion and so forth, you're doing the right thing, in today's times, for now. Your life is much greater than what is going on in the political world.

That said, you still have a voice, a role and a say in how your world works and how you can live the best life you can, in your communities, with a rightful and open mind.

There's bad and good in everything, but right now the majority of politics is a bad place to be, especially in the western world. So do what is good for you, be kind to all and respect everyone's views, whether you like them or not. Politics is supposed to unite people, always remember that.

Reading the news most days, because I like to keep in touch with what is happening, is probably not a good thing for your health and mind, but I'm stronger than the consequences of it and know how to handle it, it still leaves a devastating affect on one.

I question why and how such things can happen and why the world is like this, to see how things can be improved for everyone; but my opinions and ideas only go as far as talking to someone about it or submitting feedback which isn't always acted on.

I question everything, I see it from all angles before judging, I make my own intuition, I use common sense and reason, I utilise my skills and experience to the limits, to better understand these things; yet I can't still believe the world still operates like this, especially when we all know we can do much better and support one another.

Whilst most shrug it off and try and move on, there's still a number of audiences who can't overcome these things and it plays a role in their daily lives and it can potentially affect them, whether they were the ones who are the news story or whether they are the ones subject to the new stories.

The news changes people's lives, their perspectives and the way they begin to look at the world, especially our children. In this digital age, everyone is more subject to the news and it can have more of a profound impact on people and make them think all sorts of things, from an education point of view right up to a careless perspective.

What problems does society really have today? That's the most important question and until we deal with these problems in a constructive manner, then we will not see an improvement for society. It's not a one man job, no job is, it's a collective effort, where human beings come forward, work in focus groups, echoing their findings to the world as they happen and where resolution can be formed and acted upon, not forgotten about after a week, a month, or a year later.

We're supposed to be better than this and we need to include everyone in the discussion, with an open mind, an open view and an open world, so we feel like we're doing this together, not alone or being isolated from important conversation that matters to us all in the long term.

i can follow the rule book and do good all my life, but I'm still going to be subject to the world's cruel news stories, I may also be subject to bad actors in the world and I fully understand why people turn to the bad side, it's because they are fed up of trying to live a good life, which is hampered by the bad side of the world; this explains why gangs and cartels exist, it explains why they want to take matters into their own hands, it explains why they live the way they do, because our governments, because our society, because our authorities, allow for bad things to happen, even when they clearly have all the resources they complain they never have to stop bad things from happening, when they do.

At the end of the day, it's the people of the world, who design society, and it shouldn't be we can't do it, it shouldn't be the world will never change, it shouldn't be no one cares, it should be we will do everything in our power to serve the people out of crisis and into a good life, because it doesn't just serve our most vulnerable, but it also serves the well off, from being subject to any bad which they may typically encounter in life.

A positive outlook should always be the focus, considering we're all willing to work together, in the most constructive way, this world has ever seen. Lets focus positively despite the challenges ahead and use our energy to shape a future, which will be remembered for many years to come; lets change the status quo of the news and society, so we can live in harmony & peace.

As Albert Einstein said along the lines, I dont think most of the time, but if something comes to mind, then I may pursue it further.

That is how my whole life has been and I know it also applies to most people. Through an era of mental health awareness and concious thinking, this fact is so important for everyone to know, in how we typically operate.

If you can reinvent a process or improve an existing one, then you will be remembered forever, if it can stand the test of time. It's not difficult to come up with ideas, but it can be difficult to come up with an idea which will stand the test of time, that will be used for a 100 or 1000 years ahead.

It may feel like everything is done, but that's not always true, when most things need improving. Every product you see in the markets today, are going through their product life cycles and they all have a shelf life, in terms of how we use them today. If you can disrupt a market and make an improvement to a particular product or even invent something which improves our ways, then you're heading in the right direction, despite what existing markets want today, the consumer is always open for new and exciting changes.

At least when I'm gone, I can say I've done the best ever work I'd ever want to do in my life, whether I had the opportunity or not to fulfil it further. I was clearly open about my views, I was using common sense, reason and simple problematic solving skills, to support my ideas, in how the world can work better.

Not many get to feel the great satisfaction I've gained. I put in, I never stopped giving, I did and said things the majorities wished they could do and say, but are too busy to do.

My intentions were to stop war once and for all across the whole world and create opportunities for the billions. I was brought up by my country and people to fulfil my role in society, I didn't just come from nowhere, no one does.

If god can bless me 1, 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60 or 70 more years and the world gives me the opportunity to help it, then I will be able to fully fulfil my life long dreams, to stop war and give everyone the right opportunities into life. I've done and said enough so far, therefore there is nothing left for me to do for now, until attitudes change and I'm given the opportunity to do my dream job, helping the world live better lives.

I may be underestimated, but the influence and power a small man like me can deliver, is powerful and I believe we all have that power, to go out there and help the masses. It's amazing how much you can change in a single day, whether it's attitude or action.

It all balls down to what do you want for your children? It makes you think of your future and what you'd really want for your children of the world, god's children.

And after I'm gone, my work will remain archived on the Wayback machine.

You can never wipe racism from the UK, when it is promoted in music, where sport divides fans from different clubs at the grass roots, where people have multiple personalities for fun, where culture makes people look different, where comedians knock the shit out of it and where the world doesn't have a real solution for it, which all of us have to follow. People choose to and not to forget it.

Therefore, lets list of things which makes us the same:

- > We all have black and white eyes
- > The palms of our hands and feet are all the same
- > Our insides all look the same
- > Our nails and skin are all see through
- > We all share common patterns
- > We all connect to our creator
- > We all start in the world on the same page
- > We are all made of the same stuff
- > We all have every colour in us

Most people know this and live better lives knowing the real facts, but minorities will continue to remind us and divide us.

Design; Discussion; Efficiency

Industry doesn't want to change when it profits and lives by the inefficient ways it practices, especially during a time when we have access to the smartest minds and resources, yet we continue in this direction.

There's no urgency like the invention of the light bulb, to change our ways from oil or candle lanterns, to a better and smarter way. We are the dumbest ever people to be alive I believe and the greatest minds to of ever lived also must think so too, unless they are ignorant to our destruction and self profit.

This is why you see competition do all kinds of things, from silencing people to making up pathetic excuses to improve.

Cars are a big one for example, where we know we can change today, but we choose to build in the most poorest ways possible, especially from a design perspective, where profit and protection are the biggest factors. Yes we can continue to improve efficiency in the fuel, yet we don't want to drop it, because there's people out there who live by their cars, there's people out there who want to keep it this way forever and there's many rich people out there who profit from these inefficiencies. Electric is clearly the way, where Tesla has proved this and thrown a spanner in the works; not only is it the way, but we can make electric for next to nothing these days through innovative methods; you must of seen how spinning two magnets in a continuous loop can produce electricity, but on a more grander scale, we can meet the world's needs, but yet again the energy companies want to burn the world's resources before they move on to the next technology, which some may of invested in, but choose to ignore its existence. They are frightened that they will never get to drive their gas guzzling beautiful cars on the road again, when it does go to electric completely, but they can and should be converted if they want that option.

I understand the argument that you can always find more innovative ways to improve, but I also believe that if we ignore ideas which will stand 100 or 1000 years ahead, then that's just complete ignorance and selfishness.

Will the world ever change? Will the world ever become more efficient? Will we all stand together and find ways forward for everyone?

Designer; Ideas; Life

You don't just think of an idea out of the blue, these ideas are forming in the background around the things which make you, you, until you feel it's time to talk about them or deploy them.

It's not a personal effort although it may feel like you own the idea, it's a world effort, which has made you realise this was and is possible. The only difference is, that many people may of thought about the idea, but may of never deployed it or found it hard to deploy.

For me, I don't personally want to own ideas, I just want to discuss good ideas, which many people or companies can deploy for the masses. It's not a big deal to me, I'd rather come up with a lot of good ideas and not keep them to myself, so the people with the resources and knowledge can deploy them. It's better than waiting a life time to see one idea come true, versus sharing many ideas which will more than likely come true for the masses, not just me. It's also a plus, so you welcome people to steal your ideas and don't have the worry of people stealing your ideas, when you look at it this way, because ultimately, you want to see the idea come to life.

Giving feedback is such an amazing thing in life.

To help improve our planet and surroundings, today I thought of an interesting idea that our technology manufacturers should be pursuing as an obligation in helping improve our planet.

Why don't our mobile phones come with a basic core feature that allows us to take a photo of something that may be a hazard or may need improving, which is then communicated across a number of networks and is then sent to the right department in your town, city or country, where the problem can be seen by the right people immediately and acted upon.

It's a very simple system and all operating system developers should make it a core feature, if they care so much about our planet. --- You pull up your quick menu, you navigate the feedback icon, you take a photo, specify hazard or improvement, add a quick description and submit. The feedback is then channeled across the internet when connected or reconnected, to the location of the photo's feedback handler, usually the council, where it is then digitally forwarded to the right department within the council for them to act upon it right there and then. You can then, login to your account using your associated phone number, where you can see your submissions and follow the progress on it and add notes if necessary in a responsible way.

This is our world, we design it by the day and feedback is such an important element in allowing us all to improve our planet, together.

I can't do this without all of you, we need to work together, for a better future! The amount of times we've all seen and walked past something we knew could deserve some attention, this is the solution and best way to deal with it today. We shouldn't rely on business to profit from it, but make it for the better changes our planet seeks. We need to empower people through change and technology, if we allow them to submit and have running documentary of it, then they will feel better for it and feel like they are playing their role in society.

Change, we are built upon the elements of change, we seek change for the better, we love change where there is order, change will and should always be welcomed throughout our life.

People are so in their ways that they sometimes deny change, it's a trait of life, but change they really want. Change is healthier than doing the same thing. Embrace variety, create schedule, follow your future, mix it up, do it how you like.

My example: They really think they know the OAP's and they theoretically imply stuff like, old people don't like change (they go on to believe it), they implicitly imply in the teaching of care workers, not to look into their eyes. I see how one side of the industry doesn't want to see good change, but most of us will stand up and protect us all, through the power of change.

One day, someone will pick up on all my statuses and bring real good and important changes, we all deserve.

You don't need money to plan out your dreams or business and without a plan, you have no direction or visual representation, so you need to have a personal book, where you can start planning it and interrogating your plan, so when you want to deploy your ideas or dream, you just know it will work, despite what the naysayers may have to say.

Yes you may need money or opportunity to kick start some of your dreams or business, but you don't need much, you can start small and upscale accordingly. Less talk, more action, starts with planning. As you know, nothing happens without a plan, especially for great things and without a plan, you can just end up going anywhere, although I'm not faulting that method, as some people like to plan it in their head and just get on with it.

Science; Wonder; Evolution

If we interpret that the universe is a giant cell, which is similar to our brain cells which scientists have proved, then the universe governs us and helps us interpret our position in the universe, which isn't too hard to comprehend.

Just like we've worked out that animals use maps in their heads to navigate, then so must we, through the universe, as it changes; then in theory, we've seen everything already through reading our position in the universe where we live and we have got so much more to see, of what is happening in real time and what is going to happen, thankfully subconsciously. How else does life evolve and adapt; it has to be through how we build a map of our entire surroundings and what has happened, to adapt and evolve. It's no coincidence, it's science, which explains a lot of things!

We are a product of our world, we are a product of our universe, it's not difficult to understand and in order to live in it, we must be able to understand our universe, which our minds do, without a thought it may seem, to survive in it. Life can not adapt or evolve without this knowledge of what has already happened.

<https://www.popsoci.com/science/article/2010-05/new-technique-uses-bodys-stem-cells-regenerate-teeth>

Science; Technology; Stem Cells

Scientists have proved that stem cell technology is the way forwards in helping combat an array of health issues and this one which has been in testing for a couple of decades now, for the regrowth of teeth, can be life saving, as our mouths are our input to living and if we can improve this, then we can increase our health many fold.

Now it's time the scientists and investors, stop looking at health in a competitive way and move towards safer, newer and longevity type technology, which is going to help us all on planet earth. Competition stares us in the eyes and makes the rich and powerful reevaluate their potential of products, raising the price of them to keeping the technology for themselves, when initially the scientists developed them with the intentions to help everyone, whereas the investors put them on the market in such a competitive way that only few can get the treatments, which is a truly sad thing, especially as we're all and should be in it together.

From researching on the web, there is evidence to suggest that our existing treatments at the dentist are the wrong way to do dentistry and there is mounting evidence that stem cell technology is the way forwards in treating many things, where we use our own cells to repair an area and without problems from arising in the future.

The world needs to drop its financial ego and start doing what the greats did in the past, get them to market, for the masses, otherwise they will just be remembered for the ones who chased the big money and didn't fulfill our world and scientists goals. There's ways around patents, there's ways around competition and it's just the start of the health era in technology, because once they do the right thing, they will collectively be remembered for it in history (which they seek so much), then they can go on to do their life's next best work, allowing them to succeed even further, rather than being stuck in just developing one or two innovative treatments in their lifetime.

The great thing about facebook is that you get to document your life, your journey and your memories, whereas in the street, they are shown, but not documented.

You can show friends a video or photo in the street, but it is left in the moment and in the street. You can have a conversation with people, but it can be left there or sometimes forgotten.

Facebook has allowed the masses to document the things they are interested in or want to share with their friends. This was never possible before social networks and although people may say, one is talking to the wall or other crude things, but in reality, one is documenting their interests, documenting their life and progressing in a more visual way, versus the streets, where lots can be forgotten.

It's an incredible feat in technology and our capabilities are just being noticed and recognised. We all have a role to play on social media, in our ever changing world, to make togetherness a reality.

In life, you have to visualise what you do want, not what you don't want, it's as simple as that, although habits maybe hard to break or easy, depends which way you look at it. Our minds are designed to have focus on what we do want and to burden it with what we don't want, is sacrificing our minds to do more work. If one has the intentions to visualise what they do want, then what they do want, will cancel out what they don't want automatically, without a thought, considering you know what you do want, which most do.

Just like a game of snooker, you may want more points, like you may want more money in life, but it's not the points or money you chase, it's the ability to win, have fun and get to where you need to be in the game or in life. Focus only on what you do want and you will get it, with your rightful intentions. Once you know and have that focus, there's no need to think about it, just do it.

Imagine you were just about to lose everything in your life, in a split second thought, then in your second split second thought, what would you come back and do, what would you come back and say, what would you change? Don't think much about it, you probably already have!

They say you don't know what you've got until you lose it, but this technique might help you in many ways, to do better, to think better and go in the best direction, your mind knows. Life is such a magical experience, there's so much more to it and we usually know the answers in what we really want and it's easy when you focus on living the best life you can.

The internet is a fantastic source for learning how to do things and it is only really being recognised by the masses, whether you use a search engine or whether you use WikiHow, there is tons of information out there, which I've always known about.

More recently, I've decided to setup a Wiki via www.TheWayToDolt.live, where people can create pages, contribute and engage in topics, which can help the world more specifically design better, to help improve and spur on the developments of a more strategic, greener and environmental friendly world. It will be where people can suggest ideas in how things to be improved from a design perspective, which can be reviewed by the community, as I understand the world currently designs things to only last so long. Furthermore, it will not just suggest how things can be designed better, but it will also encourage people in learning in how to recycle better or restore their objects.

I don't plan to spend much time on it, but any time I do spend on it, will be productive and with the intentions on bringing the community together, to create, engage and add to the wiki pages. I will be setting a template standard for the pages for people to follow, so it is very orderly and people can contribute accordingly.

The world is constantly changing by design, for many reasons; now it's time to design for things to last, not to be chucked away in the bin, which usually end up in landfill, in most scenarios. A community, powered by the people, teaching the manufacturers to follow, where they can feel meaningful and play a role in society and be remembered for their input, regardless of patents, investors or challenges. It's a simple low maintenance not for profit project, which will open up the way we look at design, once and for all.

We all start out as writers in our world and when one learns how to write in constructive ways to make a positive impact, it's a great satisfaction, to be able to play a role in society and to also be recognised for any important contributions one can make.

Through our writing, all of us have the power to go out there and use it as our means to get to where we want to go in life.

Recently submitted feedback to Forza who have applied my feedback in a particular mode called the Drift Camera, with hopes to see it being deployed across all Forza games in the future.

In addition, I've sent feedback to TVPlayer, who took my feedback on board and will be discussing it with their team, which will hopefully allow people to create a schedule of programmes to watch, so it automatically switches channel according to my schedule.

If I can do it, then so can you. Forums are a great way to express feedback in a constructive and productive way. We all have the ability to make an impact in our world.

They say everything has been done, but nothing is ever done and the world we live in, everything is continuously changing, improving and adapting to meet our world's needs.

It is a phrase, which can affect one's mind at looking at design or processes, when in reality, we need to continue in interrogating existing design and processes, to ensure, as a world, we move in the right direction for humanity and nature.

It will only ever be done, when all design is recyclable and developed with 100% efficiency in mind, when everyone on earth is living and following the best processes available to them, when political and financial motives are put behind us, when the world is in full acceptance of one another's cultures, where there is a sense of human culture at the heart of every religion and it is when everyone can behave like humans and say, I can live in this world, I can live with everyone, I can live with these design practices, I know I can hand this world on to our children, who will cherish and protect the progression we made for us and them.

And even after we have done the basics and feel like everything is done, we should always remember that nothing is ever done, we must continue to progress, to innovate and to be creative in the life we can live, in line with our world's morals and values, to make sure we always go in the best direction, that each and every single one of us deserves.

There has never been a time like this in our history and we should unite in what we know today, to design and build in the best ways possible. One day, life will no longer be about money, it will be about a better working life and with progression at the forefront, for all of us, and if you want something, there will be a universal world currency, for you to work for it, which we now know is such a healthy thing to do, given a better working environment and hours; hence with the tougher the job or sacrifice, then the bigger the reward or token, respective to gender or faith, that way you can continue to embrace variety and uniqueness in our beautiful home, earth.

We the people, invented design, we invented practices and we invented work, through our creator's means, therefore we will continue to work and make opportunities regardless of how well we design our future.

The world is designed around an array of problems to eventually frustrate us all, just so the rich, the powerful and the corrupt can keep living their lavish lifestyles. It doesn't take a rocket scientist with a medal to work that one out. Great change is in order, change that is far from ever becoming a reality, but change that is needed for everyone, including the rich, the powerful and the corrupt. Will the world ever work right for everyone one day? It is hard to say, but it is possible. We can all survive through any problems that come our way, but are unnecessary problems really appropriate.

In anger, in frustration, in disappointment, just remember, if you felt it, so did our creator and our creator is doing everything to balance your emotions, your energy, to keep you strong, to keep you going and to help you forwards.

Just allowing the emotion without anger should be enough and rather than being angered, our creator will do the thinking, do the decision making and do the correcting of what may have happened.

I've been doing my best to exercise this all my life and now you know how I handle this world.

Hey friends and family, you may know this ugly mug, who is actually a great friend of mine, who is deep down beautiful on the inside and outside really, believe it or not ha ha! We have our jokes!

Well to cut things short, if you can help him on his way to go to Italy, you will play a massive role in supporting him to the European Masters Games in Trap Shooting, supporting our country fellowmen

Car dreams...

As a kid I've always wanted the Ferrari as a dream car, but never knew which one and now after all these years, I've decided that it would have to be the La Ferrari 458 Italia... As I've grown up, I've wanted the Audi RS5 for the last 5-10 years, as a realistic dream car... Then the Bugatti Veyron alongside the Chiron were born and I see them as very distant dream cars to have, but yet still a dream!

Of course, I'd also love an Aston, a BMW, a Maserati and a Rolls Royce, but I can't have them all in my dream car collection!

Competition, jealousy and hate are our world's biggest killers, not diseases or natural disasters, where the human race is at war with itself on many fronts, through our history, through our genes, through our great divides, that govern us all today.

It affects how everyone on planet earth lives, works and operates. These traits only spur into more negative traits, anger, pain and confusion, without resolution, if not eradicated.

Examples; countries, businesses, including people are in competition, through success or money, sometimes both, where they want to be better than others, when in reality, in our creator's mind, we are all the same, should be treated the same, regardless of what one knows, what one can do, how much one has progressed or how mentally or physically one is different.

We need The Queen to step up yet again, to provide us with a catalog of her best ever speeches, to speak up yet again, in how we can see a future for us all, in these ever changing times, now and into the future. Her vision is remarkable and her words are powerful, more so uniting. She is a real woman, who wants the best for everyone, we all need to be more like our queen.

The difference between today's way of dealing with mental health versus the traditional way of dealing with mental health is as followed.

The traditional way is a lets deal with it now approach, by moving on right away, by resolving as much of the issue there and then and instantly becoming stronger from the experience, remembering to learn from it, by never thinking or talking about it again and by just simply moving on, regardless of anything that happened, unless you need to sympathise with someone about their problem, by sharing yours.

The new way is, lets deal with it now, by opening up about everything, lets repeat the story about the issue to about 3 different professionals a few times nevermind family and friends, then after some time, lets figure out the best way to deal with it, then to be labelled forever that you went through this experience and had mental health issues, yet to be reminded about it, with maybe the right or wrong help, most of the time too late; usually an issue, inflicted by the world, not you, where you are made to look like the problem, not the world, where the world will not change these problems that arise, but expects you to change.

Then on a different front, there are people who are suffering from issues, there are people who are suffering from issues who go crazy at times and then there are people who are suffering from issues who are crazy most of the time, most of the time, conflicted by the world's ways.

I prefer the traditional route, as it does make me more stronger and on the other hand, I do not mind talking about my issues. The only times I have suffered, is when Google developers attacked my developments, when Facebook ignored me for so long, when secret service left me in the dark in my quest to help them find missing children, when I professionally made applications to almost every organisation again and again with only rejection over the years, when money issues killed me and when my mother and sister had daily arguments for two years just before my sister had a mental breakdown before she went to prison, because of a man. I do like how in today's times, you can openly talk about things and how support methods are being improved on the other hand.

It is usually the world's ways, in why most people suffer and don't know how to deal with it. My way is true to the traditional way, but to make sure I never forget them issues, so they never happen again, but also forget about them, so I can move on. Now Im talking for me as always, im talking for you and Im talking for everyone.

It is true, the world is what it is and most don't care about helping everyone, just themselves. People will say you are inadequate, say lots of mean things, so do your best to stay strong and fight for what you want to do and be, because no one else will do it for you, never mind back you, during some of the hardest challenges life can throw at you. The power is in you and your actions. In my world, no one is mental, no one is crazy, no one is a label, we are all the same, inflicted by this world's ways.

In life, you can have your favourites, but when it comes to people, having favourites causes divides and therefore it is better to see your collection of friends as your favourites, who make you, you. There will always be friends and then friends, if you get my logist, but again, as long as you treat them all the same, then at least there will be no divides and just straight up friendships.

I have always lived by this all my life, now I get to document it and say it works. That is how you come through the world, where people warm to you, want to be your friend and like you, because you treat everyone the same and how you would want to be treated. Yes it is true that some friends will be there more than others, but in reality, you cant be with them all at the same time, even though most of your friends will be there for you if you asked to meet them all in the same room, however practicality and time are usually the boundaries, everyone has priorities, some more than others. To a world of friends, my collection of friends, thanks for being there when you could, I appreciate you all, even if you didnt have time, I knew you were there, thinking of you at times, while you were thinking of me.

The science behind prayers are a lot more important than people think and it helps in many ways, where you don't have to think whilst doing it, but allow your natural body, mind and soul to feel the importance of it, especially in line with god's importance and your presence within god. It is a very relieving act and when you do it often, you see the benefits!

Whatever the task, you don't need to think about it whilst doing it, you only need to know how to do it and to be able to do it with the upmost care. Let yourself be free, everything in life is so simple and easy to do.

On the other hand, if you're learning how to do something for the first time, then you may need to, depending on your learning style or if you're a problem solver like me, maybe from time to time you will think about it, to see how the process can be improved.

Feedback is like an invisible indicator, that we can see through a series of events, where we can understand things and people better in our world. We are all naturally emitting feedback, feedback shapes our world, we are continuously working out the world from the trillions of feedback points present to us.

The more feedback we can collect, understand and respect, the better we can improve our world and belongingness; where everyone has a role to play.

I've envisaged the entire future of feedback for our world and it's a million miles away, but still achievable. That said, we've never understood the world better than we've ever done in humanity's history and it is just the start of this feedback journey to better experiences.

To Spotify, a number of things you can do to help improve the user experience are as followed:

- ▶ To be able to see an index of artists from A-Z, so people can easily add artists to their library (including a filter where you can see popular artists or not so popular artists), maybe include it in the Discover zone.
- ▶ To be able to filter through my Artists from A-Z, as currently you can only view artists from a random order (Open Spotify)
- ▶ To be able to share my profile of Artists, like you can share a song or playlist, but to be able to share an index of my Artists too.
- ▶ Like you can have Watch parties on facebook, can you have the option to have Listen parties on Spotify too.
- ▶ When selecting an artist, to be able to also see all the songs from that artist on open Spotify.

Look forward to the updates and your response.
Thanks, Sunny.

I may give tons of feedback, but I do this because I want to help the world and the way we experience processes.

Most of the time I am usually right, but I will accept when I am wrong and I expect people to interrogate my feedback, challenge the feedback and use it if it is useful.

To a life of feedback, we all have a role to play and the sooner you can document it, the sooner you can have a career like mine. When I first started, I was not great, I even came up with debatable ideas, but eventually as I began to document it, I became better at identifying and suggesting, all with my initial intent, to help improve the world, not to gain the recognition and that is even true today, as much as the recognition may be important; if you can see your suggestion come to light or see an influence because of something you have highlighted, then you are succeeding and being recognised.

All ready for another beautiful day 📷

Pricing is as followed, £30 for a 2 hour consultation which will help the client realise their specification and targets, with a copy of notes for the client. Considering the client wants to go ahead, then the cost of the work is dependent on the client's needs, where I will be extremely reasonable with price, cheaper and more dedicated than most web companies and available to contact at all times. On the go ahead, it will be £40 for the kit which is at cost, but a massive step in documenting your business, from the very start.

If you know someone who needs a website doing, let them know I'm one the best out there, I can design almost anything, I've studied tons of websites, I know how social media elements work well with website and business goals and more importantly, I'm ready to start this journey with them to success, whatever the business model or specification, we can now do almost anything in a web page.

Last year, I did a website for £400 with another developer who was paid £400 which was a character creator and personalised merchandise website, which was done up to a very good standard and the client was very happy with it. I was informed he approached some companies and some were asking for £5,000 and another was asking for £20,000. On this occasion, I decided to be extremely cheap, because I wanted the work and experience, however I can't go without this time, but I will do my best to give the cheapest price, with the quality and care to go with it.

25 May 2019, 16:19

When you start your £30 two hour web consultation session with me, I will begin by using the wallpaper scroll, to address all of the appropriate questions relevant to your business, I will use it to create sketches and I will use it to take any notes throughout the session. At the end of your session, you will understand your business better, you will see how your website fits within your business model and you will know if you want to proceed with the web development. If you choose to go ahead with me, I will recommend buying the £40 kit, which will include your scroll and will be used as development progresses, which you will get to keep afterwards. Your web development journey starts, as soon as you start talking about your needs to a web designer. If we can capture those moments, it would be great, therefore this process is a good step in the right direction to documenting those crucial events, which helped kick start someone's dream.

At the end of your session, you will understand your business better, you will see how your website fits within your business model and you will know if you want to proceed with the web development. If you choose to go ahead with me, I will recommend buying the £40 kit, which will include your scroll and will be used as development progresses, which you will get to keep afterwards.

Your web development journey starts, as soon as you start talking about your needs to a web designer. If we can capture those moments, it would be great, therefore this process is a good step in the right direction to documenting those crucial events, which helped kick start someone's dream.

You've got to feel the best to be the best, in anything you do. Onwards and upwards to the Championship and then to the Premiership after; it would be awesome if we can win every game next season and set the standard, that we are 11 men on the pitch and we can beat any team, through our indefinite belief. We can only grow stronger through these experiences, together! I love you Derby!

To be able to enforce a safety badge when user aged 18+ who is visiting a profile under the age of 16 for example or if the user is 19 and wants the badge to show.

As age can not be indicated sometimes or hidden for privacy, the profile viewer can instead be shown a safety badge, which implies they are below an age threshold and also implies to be sensible.

It is a problem and if the network does not provide safety measures automatically for the things it can do, then facebook will be responsible. As more and more people search and browse for people, facebook need to provide the basics to protect our children.

Today is a reminder that our work is not done. Today is a reminder that we've got many more people to save. Today is a reminder that we are making progress.

Our history shall never be forgotten and when Africa and Asia put their weapons down, then the world will be war free, where they will be the last segment in our world war history. They will also deserve the honour we give ourselves, for fighting a war no man or woman would never want to fight, because in the end, no one wants to hurt anyone, but it is amazing what people will do to survive, whether wrong or right.

We shall never let the very few destroy the many; we will be united in all colours, in all divides and in all of god's love.

Love; Work; Advocate

Although my working life has been somewhat patchy, I've managed to keep as active as I can, through any mental and physical health issues that have come my way.

I've always been about work, I've done my best to work, I've done work since I left school, using up my educational holidays to work and when I joined college, I was working at the airport and into university life from 2-4 days a week. Since university, I've always been on the lookout for the job I really want to do, design digital experiences and to improve journeys. I did not have a great deal back then, besides my dream of wanting to do it, now I look back and see all the small things I did, to build a portfolio like no other; you just have to get involved in your field and start building upon your portfolio, because no one will tell you to. Throughout this time, I've done work with the family, I've worked for various companies, maybe not as much as I would like to, but I committed as much as I could, time, energy and love.

Behind the scenes I was setting the benchmark alongside all those who love to work, whilst those who said they hated work and moaned about the work they do, I was doing the opposite, promoting a better mindset to work, always bringing a positive mindset to work with me and just generally loving the work I did, whatever work I had to do. Don't get me wrong, I see why people don't like work, but it does not help, unless they are going to improve it through moaning; work is good for everyone's well being.

I've seen challenges that I would never ever want anyone to go through, in their pursuit of wanting to work, I've seen all the objections along the way, even though I present myself well and everyone who knows me will say I'm highly employable. I've continuously raised the bar and tried my best to go above and beyond, when I'm allowed to. Since I left school, I would encourage and support friends into work, pushing them, not forcing them, even helping some with their CV's; like I had a friend who had been out of employment for a very long time and whilst I was in work, we'd occasionally chat about work and in the end, he did it all by himself and has been in work for nearly a couple of years. I remember all them times when work situations were not working out for my closest of friends and coming back from work, going straight to theirs and just being an encouraging and supportive friend, because they seen some really tough times before they got the job they really wanted to do. In return, they have been there for me, massively in recent years, so it's good to just be you and if you want to give, one day your favour could be repaid, when you need it.

Now I'm in a position, where I can say I can do any job, because I've got the right type of attitude towards work and you name it, I can do it or work out how to do it using the wealth of information we have access to, today. I like an achievable challenge, one which I know I can gain something through or succeed in and whatever the task, big or small, whether I complete it or fail, there's a lot of gain in trying the experience. Surprising, I've actually done a lot in recent years, although it may be hard for friends and family to see, I've got the history to show it.

The person I've become, wasn't just to do with me, it was to do with all those who supported me along the way, it was the role models I seen and a lot of respect goes to my mum, because it was my mum who I really wanted to make proud.

For saying Facebook are a pioneer in social media, they've still got alot more to do, from improving our safety to giving us a more featured experience.

This is all about the facebook story, never done and adjusting to the people's needs and times. The network we see today, has formed around us, been defined by us and is now one of our world memory banks. Everyone who has used it, has helped shape it and left their mark upon it.

As a user experience designer expert, I can see the network in beautiful visual maps within my mind, from the bare framework to the masses of data that fills it. I see how the platform has different experiences, depending on what device you use, I see how people use it in different ways, I see how the developer tools are useful for businesses and people, I see how people turn to the network to document their most important life events; I see the importance of facebook, regardless of your opinions about the network, you're entitled to your opinions, on facebook, where freedom of speech, freedom of life and freedom to be, meets reason to exist, in line with who you really are in the real world; facebook is now in the real world, our real world book, designed for everyone in the world.

Opposition is a beautiful thing, just like in politics, although you may not really like it, it helps a world, a country or even a network, decide on what it really wants, it opens up conversation, it pushes people to do what is ethically and morally right in the end.

It has been a pleasure giving so much to facebook so far, because in reality facebook has given us all so much more, more than any other network, country or other world has, the ability to connect with the people in our world. Although it did not technologically change much, it homed in on existing technologies and it really improved the way we connect and how we present ourselves; it set the standard and ever since, we have all not knowingly been giving them feedback, where we all indirectly helped them design one of the world's best digital experiences.

As facebook and user experience designers know, there's always something to improve, there's always a new feature to deploy and there's always more research to be done. Once you have figured out how a system or network works, you can see things others can't and you can suggest better improvements; it just totally makes sense! A lot of good ideas form from common sense when you have knowledge in a particular area.

To be able to see the entire network in a split second and then see where it is going, is a designers dream, powered by passion and love to use and improve it.

One day, facebook might think I'm significant, but for now, it is just me that thinks so, in my journey in helping improve the facebook experience.

Treat people how they treat you and the world will never work, but if you treat people how you want to be treated, then we have a very bright future ahead of us. In the end, we have to live with everyone. Just because someone may of mistreated you, it doesn't mean you have to mistreat them, you just need to be smart about it and eventually the world will correct itself, as you begin to make all the right moves. Fire does not put out fire.

I'm a fan of all music, more specifically feel good music and so I've decided to make this playlist. Niche music was a massive thing when growing up in my teens, grime was a progressive movement, now you see the two mixed together in a lot of club bangers more than ever, which of some I do like and can uplift me in different ways. However, I've decided to pull it back to the old school dance tunes, because they really make me feel so good!

Music has changed massively and will continuously change into the future. Music has the power to do many things, both good and bad, so you have to interrogate the meaning of lyrics and agendas from artists more than ever in history and take a stance back until you've seen where the artist has come from, where the lyrics formed and how they came about. Like I can hear from the tone of a beat or lyric from the artist within a second if it is a sad or happy tune and just know from there if I want to listen to it or not, I've learnt how to do it.

Web; Design; Experience

In web design, I can design almost anything in the web page and it almost feels like anything is possible. These days, people don't just want anything, they want something, they want an experience, which reflects their brand, their products and their team, which they can look back at and see that it played a major role in their progression, to help their users do what they need to do.

Each and every potential experience or process matters, the way people experience these practices, the way people feel when experiencing the journey and how the service becomes a part of people's lives that use it. Perspective testing is a massive thing, to cater everyone who experiences the service; all users should be treated respectfully, regardless of their capabilities.

Friends, do you work from home? If so, what is it like, tell me more...

As much as I like the prospect of working from home, I have to question myself, do I really want to work at home, by myself. Although I'm used to being around people, I've been striving for a work from home job, where I can be productive, help improve a product or service and do some of the most meaningful work in my life.

I've realised it is not so much a work from home job I want, it is a mixture of the two, where I can be in office most of the week and then be able to do some work from home too.

Suitability of Job; Live Life Better Derbyshire

As I have previous experience in working and supporting people through education and employment, I have gained a wide range of transferable skills that can help me in this role; such as using computer equipment and software, taking notes and planning, communicating effectively and fulfilling team targets. Furthermore, I'm a very supportive individual, where I'm very good with people, where I've supported friends with their CV's and been an encouraging role model to anyone I meet, naturally bringing out the good in them.

As I want to see everyone do their best, it would be a pleasure to provide core support to people, who are interested in doing better. This role provides me the opportunity to do meaningful and supportive work, where I know one day, through helping anyone I can, they will return the favour to helping others and the cycle will continue. Through talking to service users of this support line, I will be able to help them feel good about making this step towards living life better and aiding them with their needs.

What if I told you, the place you come from is well and truly magical, the place is mostly made up from star striking stuff, the place is our creator, our god, our home, the place is intelligent enough to help life through anything; would you look at the world with a new light, would you be more appreciative of life, would you value god more.

You have to remember where you have come from, our creator, who influences everything we experience, deserves all of the credit, to give us the life we get to live today; today it is too easy to become distracted and less aware of our home's nature; everything, which allows us to exist in our positions. There has been a great sacrifice and god is constantly paying the price, because after all, god made our home, god made us, god made everything, god being everything, god being everywhere, god being everyone. These are god's characteristics, this is what makes god, god, god learns in real time and through this, god can adapt to any scenario.

We are a product of god, with everything god has, in us. We have been made from our ever changing surroundings, being our creator. Adaptation and evolution did not happen because of magic, although it may look magical.

Hey friends, can you like my page please and if you are not too interested in it being in your feed, you can like it but unfollow it. I really appreciate your support. Thanks, Sunny!

I guess the greatest thing about being able to make this game, is I get to work on it with my nephew too, who is an avid battle royal fan & player and is interested in being able to shape the game with his good ideas.

Lately, rather than visiting him and just watching him play his battle royal games, which is cool; the other day I took my notebook and showed him what I was working on and his excitement was through the roof, because he realised what this meant. We chatted away, discussed elements of the game and I made sure he knew that if it didn't become a big game, that we at least had fun in doing all the top secret work together, because it was something we was massively eager in working on; then my nephew replies, well at least we have a better chance of getting a job at another battle royal company and incorporate our ideas there.

This status is a clue to the mystery secret which is to be revealed a month after launch! There will be clues scattered over the digital sphere and we will do our best to guide you to them, so you can have a punt at what the secret will reveal!

The campaign aims on promoting the message that "A dog is for life, not just for Christmas", teaching people of all ages about the life of a dog in a typical family and how 4 out of 10 dogs end up in a rescue centre each year. I look forward to working with Barbara on her social media campaign and the journey has just got started with updates coming in this week. To be protected by our creator, you must be a good person, you must have good intentions and you must always have a good heart. You are not here to impress anyone, you are here to serve god and god will do the rest.

Time and time again, eventually all bad things come to an end and the good will always outlive the bad. Protection isn't invincibility, it's a guide to safer grounds and you must always follow god's instincts.

In life you have to challenge everyone and everything, it's a way of life. You have to stand up against the bad, you have to alienate oppression, you have to interrogate negative intensions and you have to do what is right. A world without activists will go nowhere.

Life happens in phases and it's important to recognise these phases, so you can move forwards and progress.

It gives you the ability to start afresh, to iron out any inpurities, to focus on what matters, to give you the wings to keep flying, despite all the challenges you've met, so you can overcome and strengthen, as a human being.

You shouldn't reach breaking point before realising it is time to move on from one phase to another, you should become in tune with yourself, know when it is time to move on and act accordingly. People will try and guide you, but no one will do it for you, so you have to take control and be in charge of your own destiny,

It's not going to be easy, but it's what you make of it; you have to make it easier for yourself, you have to learn how to handle it and you have to be prepared to overcome anything that comes your way.

This Christmas and New Years into 2020, we should embrace community and bring community back to everyone.

There's a lot I think facebook can do. It could become the backbone of community in every country, in how it exactly brings people together, for better causes.

I know there's millions of people, 200 million, if not more, who would love to see how community can work for them, to be able to make a living, through community led projects. Or even just for people who want to be able to have a say in how their part of the neighbourhood should look - a facebook group will provide opinions. The facebook platform provides the landscape for community to thrive.

After reviewing Harry Dunn's death, who was killed unlawfully by CIA operative Anne Scoolas, who was driving on the wrong side of the road, I've devised a solution that both the CIA and SIS should consider for international driving. A simple live saving sticker like the red one in the photo attached will help people remember which way to lean towards when on single roads, dual roads and roundabouts, making them more vigilant of that side. It can also be reversed for left hand roads, such as Britain. @ [88647694548:274:Northamptonshire Police] @ [514399768616814:274:Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency] @ [857515997596741:274:Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)] Thanks, Sunny.

The world is going to grind down to a halt, where money which makes it go round, may complicate how people use it soon, as people need to live.

Lots of things need to change, from the way businesses work to the way people navigate. Technology has allowed us to move into the digital era, but we need to do more, society needs to be cleaner.

From touching cash points to the transfer of money, deadly diseases and viruses can be easily transferred.

Society needs to be better prepared for the next epidemic and governments across the world need to enforce better practices for businesses and people to follow.

There needs to be better solutions for public technology that we come into contact with, from getting a ticket at the train station to opening the door at your local shop, everything needs to be addressed.

Money which complicates how people can have cleaner homes and cleaner businesses, may well be its pitfall, in how we fight diseases and viruses in the future, as they may not be able to afford to implement better practices.

It's not that Derby or its people don't want to see Derby do good, it's because we have people who make decisions about Derby's future, who don't even live in Derby, who don't really know Derby or its people, who don't really care about the future of Derby.

Every city and town deserves to do good and make sure its residents have the best opportunity to participate in the development of where they live.

It's kind of like business warfare, but within central and local government, which is influenced by people and businesses who aim to profit from government decisions.

I'm not saying we don't get a say, but what's the point in having a say if nothing changes or improves for the better. Society welcomes people to have a say, however they will be left lost and frustrated, if nothing is done about their serious concerns, which society sees time and time again.

The story is the same from town to city up and down this country, where the few win, whilst the majority lose out, in terms of investment, planning for the future and creating new jobs for people. It's now up to central government to lay down a fairer foundation, set the model, streamline local councils with better services and be more in touch with what happens in local communities up and down this country.

It's like the only job central government want to do, is gain power and when they have, they are looking at how they can maintain power for as long as possible, shake things up, but not do much for the country and queen.

Central government can't complain that we have to have it up with our local councils, when local councils say we have to have it up with central government. If a problem is affecting a number of people in one town or city, it's more than likely affecting people in most towns or city's; therefore we need a better approach to how we problem solve and deliver solutions for everyone in our country, not to outsource it to local government, who complain they are overstretched or do not have the capacity to deal with the problems.

It's not just in central governments court, even local governments need to echo their feedback and suggest for better ways, to dealing with problems we see up and down this country. We need to return back to a more central approach, because these days council are so out of touch with their people, it's unreal!

168 hours a week...

- 56 hours sleeping
- 38 hours working
- 21 hours eating
- 14 hours cleaning
- 14 hours travelling
- 7 hours exercising
- 3 hours planning
- 15 hours wondering

Most people have to optimise their time, by default, by a way of life, but it's important to give yourself enough time, as it will have a knock on effect, if not played right.

If you actually have a life, unlike me, you will more than likely have a digital diary, you will have a good routine, you will have a sense of purpose and that time you do have left, you will cherish and use it as wisely as you can, spending time with family & friends or simply resting.

To most, this all comes second to none, most people don't even know they have a routine, because they've built routine into them and as things happen, they know what they need to do next, following their reminders.

However in today's times, society is very different and people's lives are very different, therefore people have different approaches to how they schedule their routine and deal with it, however all the principles are the same, people need to plan, people need sleep, people need work, people need to eat and so forth.

The world is going to be such a different place in 100 years time, however some things will never change and work will continue to implicate everything, in how we have good routine and better time management. When you have work, you have certainty, you have security, you can plan, you can live, you can have a future.

Society doesn't know how most people are living, but in this technological era, we can see more than ever, we can see through everything, we know who has good routine and we know who is suffering in silence. However it's not anyone's job to make sure you have a good routine, it's solely your own, that's just the way we're told to live, put yourself first policy. In the future, we need to be more involved in how we make routine work for everyone, because if we don't challenge the underlying issues which complicate routine and prevent people from getting into routine, then it will definitely have a knock on affect in society and we will all pay the price indirectly.

When all the world's people have good routine, the world will do much better, the world will have a sense of purpose, the world will have a future; until then, it's here and there, if you don't care, then why should I, attitudes.

Everything we do today will change tomorrow. Through the world's challenges, we will be required to adapt.

In the short term, businesses will profit from unsustainable practices, people will find it harder to break away from our current ways and the world as a whole will suffer.

Through our advances in science and technology, we've already worked everything out, we know there's better ways, we know what we need to do and now we've just got to go and do it.

Whilst countries including businesses put themselves first, this is one of the toughest hurdles in how we work together as a world, because the world needs universal standards, it needs universal laws, it needs a universal future, where everyone wins.

We assume that our world body, the UN, should be responsible for this change, whereas that is not the case, where we now see charities and some organisations picking up the shortfall, who are not equipped to deal with the issues at hand.

A short term approach to how this world develops and works together will only make more problems, especially during a time when every government is pushed to breaking point.

The world already has universal respect, when you see someone in the street, you help someone in need when you see you can help regardless of their background, whereas behind closed doors in parliaments across the world, if they see a nation in need, they don't support them, so what's the difference. Syria is a great example and I don't have to explain why, because they've already lost over half a million people in the last decade. It's because money is dictating every decision in parliament, from economic policy to how it can support the rest of the world.

Most governments are strapped, but it shouldn't affect how we plan for a better world, it shouldn't affect the way we design better, it shouldn't affect the way we work with one another, as human beings of our world.

point that it expires naturally. The mind is also geared to survive. It is not easy to go against our core programming, regardless of how inclined we might be. Even with all the intent in the world it is still not easy to override our survival systems, which would explain why the number of successful suicides is vastly outnumbered by the amount of failed attempts. " - Super147

I was told I was going to get a C in maths, but I got a B, how pissed off would I be that I could not go to Joseph Wright College and not be able to do my A Levels, because of a grade prediction and world crisis.

Listen to me, this is the solution, whether you like it or not. Why does it have to be someone else that has to suggest it after I've suggested it, why does it not matter when I suggest it, what's so wrong with this world.

I've given over 1000 pieces of feedback to Facebook over the last 10 years, they never respected and recognised me, they just took it and took the credit, now will my country Great Britain also push me over the edge.

People need to put things into context to understand how it will affect all our children of the future. It could ruin people's lives if we are not careful.

This also supports colleges and universities regards to the point schemes. This is just the foundation to the solution, academia will need to sit around the table and work it all out, but god give me the credit, I need to progress in life too. Help me help you, help our children.

This wall moves faster than you can think... Not literally. Therefore I've come up with a solution where people can view someone's timeline by the following filters:

1. The last day
 - 1.1 All
 - 1.2 Highlighted
2. The last week
 - 2.1 All
 - 2.2 Highlighted
3. The last month
4. The last year
5. By highlighted posts (bring it back)

When someone goes on your wall, they can be baffled by your numerous posts etc, they can not have a sense of time, it's like one big list of statuses.

I think it would also be beneficial to give the choice to the profile user whether to deploy the filter or not and I also think there should be the option to read posts from the filter in order, not back to front. For example, I choose this month on my wall, with by date oldest to newest, to read with a sense of progress, not reading back in time.

It will drive people crazy thinking about what is beyond our observable universe, what is the purpose of this universe and so forth. Some questions are better to be left for another day and if we are lucky enough, if we treat our creator and creator's creations with respect, maybe our creator will show us one day. It doesn't matter how intelligent we become, we can never answer it, however much we simulate or smash particles together.

Things to address and solve:

- To invent a antibacterial/antiviral material for phones etc
- To knock down some dirty houses
- To give relief over electricity, water and gas, etc
- To test all workers during crisis
- To implement cleaning practices like China
- To resort to non toxic substances to clean (lemon)
- To halt deliveries by push bike to reduce sweat/snot
- To make local shops leave doors open
- To get people to scan their own items
- To clean doors and handles regularly
- To provide everyone with £5k package
- To stop all illegal drug deliveries/usage
- To provide better advice for unemployed/self employed
- To create certainty versus doom and gloom
- To amp up security measures across the country
- To find the root of the problem which maybe persisting
- To support the homeless in suitable locations, which we don't mind being run down a little, not colleges where our kids will have to return.
- To...

Areas which we need to look more at:

- Transfer and touching money
- Usage and cleanliness of keys
- A bag for life a good or bad idea
- How our bodies fight viruses by themselves
- How does positive thinking help any illness
- Steam cleaning public places squad
- ...

When we said we need to do more to help the world, the world didn't care, so why should we help when the world wants us to help on its terms.

We didn't just walk into this crisis, we walked into every crisis before us and we are going to end up walking into every crisis ahead, because little is done too late.

I'm not going to give this opportunity so openly in future when you assume you don't need me in the future, but if the world works together through this crisis and makes everyone in the world feel important and like they deserve a role in society, then there could be a future.

What happens after this crisis, I go back to the life which never worked for me or will it change? How can I trust a world which changes its mind so quickly, drops people in an instance and does what it wants to do, never mind doing hundreds of millions of people wrong, with no justice at all!

Everyone who died before us is closer to our creator whether the world believes it or not and the feedback they transmit to our creator is really happening, because our creator always wants to learn, so all life on earth doesn't suffer and does better. The world can laugh at me now, but if we don't solve all world problems, then in the next crisis, we will simply not survive it!

Being closer to our creator helped me overcome every challenge in life, even when I wanted to end my life, but our creator kept on giving me energy and love to keep me here, to keep me going, in the prospect of a life I never really got to live; our creator still believed there was a chance, like our creator was invested in me and everyone else. When I write our creator, our creator understands me in this digital universe. When you look at how amazing life is designed, we were made by something quite remarkable, our creator is the only one keeping us alive, each and every day, not anything else, you don't need to be a spiritualist to know the truth.

What if I said:

I've been working for the British Intelligence Community for a number of years, part of a programme designed to identify problems in society to understand things better, to help devise solutions for society to implement.

Now great change is going to come into action nationwide, where, opportunities will be open to everyone, especially those in hardship, problematic situations and those heavily involved in crime.

Questions:

Imagine what the impact could be?

How will government liaise with our publicly announced department?

"Experience is within those who've seen it all, use it to your advantage to help build your family and friends. Now everyone has a role, where money is no longer a boundary for greater good. We all know society deserves better, where uncertainty can end and certainty can begin."

What is true?

I've been studying the world
I've been working for the world
I've never ever had a secure job
I've kept going through all struggles
I've been unreservedly observing
I want to do more

What isn't true?

I've never been hired by the gov or security services
This programme doesn't exist yet

Save Africa and Asia
Deliver the blueprints
Best science & technology

Why can't we get Africa and Asia rebuilding. We can either let them die in pain or we can give them the blueprints to the best science & technology, to start growing crops, building places and becoming self reliant. Start from one corner, then work across the countries. They need better systems, they are willing to work, we just need to do our bit, so they can do it themselves. It's not funding, it's resources and intelligence. They can begin mining the resources in their country immediately. We can get crops to yield in some of the hottest countries on earth such as Dubai, therefore now is the time to use our intelligence.

These countries are a great test bed to implement our best science and technology practices. We simply can't do it in the west, because our countries are locked by existing infrastructure and bureaucracy.

My mum was going to go to Africa this year to provide support, but I don't think that will happen now, therefore, this is the next best thing!

I believe this crisis is a cartel led movement, which aimed on disrupting society, putting crime and cases on hold, deflecting the blame, utilising on social distancing and targeting all good actors in the world so the bad could continue.

Its nothing new, the gangs have considered biological warfare many times, they've done the worst to society and they will not lay their weapons down. Whilst they ante up their worldwide war, we need to stop them at all costs, to ensure we make a better future for ourselves and our children of the world.

The death penalty is cruel, but be killed or kill the new era of killers is the question. These people have no conscious, they keep operating, they use weaknesses in technology, they use the law to get away with crime, money is everything to them, not people or their livelihoods.

There's lots the governments of the world need to do, to ensure people don't turn to a life of crime in the first place, it's not just the cartels and gangs fault, but I definitely condemn all the bad they cause. The world deserves better, but I don't think it wants to do better for everyone on planet earth, the home, our creator made for us all to live on, together, in peace and harmony. I've seen it all, yet there is more to see...

Universe for thought

You can travel in any direction and return to your same location if you keep going on earth.

However if you travel in any direction in the universe to try and reach your same location, you will end up somewhere else, because the universal locations are always moving.

They said that if you go in any direction in the universe, you will return to the same location, but this is not true, due to the universal locations always changing, it's not the same as earth, as earth's locations are somewhat fixed.

Therefore when they say that every location in the universe is the center of the universe, that is not true. To say there is no center is a stupid statement, because there is a central point to everything.

If you try and enter or probe any center of any object, you'd influence or change it, changing the structure and durability of it. That's why I think it's a top secret and there definitely is a central point to our observable universe.

It just can't ever be explained, but the basic rules apply. To believe that our observable universe is the only one is short minded. Does everything really form from nothing? No, something made this universe and something made whatever made our universe. They say that the universe is somewhat digital and in computing, statements such as if this, then that apply, including loops, therefore we maybe closer to understanding some things, but we will never know, however hard we try.

Case closed, I don't want to think about it anymore, I've thought as much as my capacity allows me.

How can we justify that the people who risk their lives saving our country, are subject to some of the world's deadliest viruses and diseases. Our hospitals are going to be our final line of protection, whatever health crisis we go through, therefore money can't be no object, unless our NHS staff and patients are simply not worth it.

We need to design our hospitals to be one of the cleanest places in the world, to better protect our NHS staff and patients. We can do it, with all the data we have about hospitals; our world leading scientists, engineers and designers can help bring the hospital of the future here today. From aged based zones to specific areas for treatment or giving birth, some areas should be segregated better and equipped for a rising population, where rooms can pop up when needed. To self cleaning technology to better practices, we can do this world right, we should look at everything.

I've got to be blunt, our government must do better, we live in an era where we can achieve anything now!

If 0.002128% of the 47 million millionaires around the world invested in my game, I would achieve my startup fund target. However I'm not looking to make more millionaires even richer, I would prefer to offer the opportunity to less fortunate people, who would love a massive return in the near future.

I know the game is going to be the game of the generation and achieve £100b on the stock market one day, however a £10b stock market evaluation would be acceptable. There are currently nearly 100 companies on the stock market with a £100b stock market capitalisation.

You can't just claim to achieve such a target without real world analysis and real monetising strategies, nor can you criticise someone making this claim when you are not aware of the knowledge they have about the real world.

When you realise the facts, noted below, you see the possibilities are possible. I've documented the facts below to help you get a better understanding of wealth distribution and money. We all know gaming is going to be one of the biggest markets in the future.

In order to be in the best health, you have to detach yourself from negative words, sayings and illnesses, otherwise it is going to affect one, as our conscious is a powerful processor of the mind.

As a prime minister or an advocate for health, it can be difficult to detach from these types of things, because it is ones job or duty of care to talk about them things, but I believe there is a more positive way around those things.

Just like the C word in the health industry was a word that people didn't like to hear, it's about detaching from that and the connotations associated with it and breathing new light into it, so you're on top of it, within yourself and the people around you.

If you can say these things in positive ways and provide certainty that we are doing as much as we can, then we can overcome the decades of negative stigma and maybe one day, as a world, we will feel more at peace when talking about it.

One who talks about the things that affects society the most, leaves a negative association behind, unless backed up with certainty to solve and positivity to lift.

I'm a man with a million ideas, but I can't do them all, so rather than trying to do everything, I'd prefer to give my feedback to the world, where all us of can benefit and industry can put them into practice.

Any idea is a good and bad idea, it's how the benefits outweigh the drawbacks, because there will always be drawbacks in anything we make.

Businesses and industry will push ideas out there, because maybe they want to profit or maybe they want to solve a particular problem, but there are problems to everything we make. Very few products in the world, last us a lifetime, which in turn, opens up opportunities for others to innovate.

The things we use may well be practical to us and we will be content with them for years, but they could sure be designed better and more eco friendly to the planet.

If someone says there is no problems with their idea or product, they haven't thought it through properly, they've just thought of the idea or shipped it, with profit as the aim.

The reason I'm making this game, is because it gives me a sense of belonging in society, it allows me to connect with people and build upon a digital family and it allows me to do amazing things with the community that make a difference to our world.

When I started out, it was just about making an amazing game, but after a few months, I realised the importance of community and it changed my entire perspective of how the game should be made and ran. It made me see what I could do with a game, from conquering some of the biggest challenges in society, right up to making the world a better place, for all of us.

Through bringing the power of gaming and community closer together, it has become more than a game, it has now become a community driven game, where many great things will happen and are already happening...

I can only thank our creator for making all of this possible, for bringing the community closer, for helping me connect with people, for allowing people to contribute and for kick starting a very bright future ahead...

I'm so proud of our creator for helping me do all the right things right now. I'm making this game right now and I can see I'm doing all the right things, I can every process I've done from start to now and the future ahead. It's all them baby steps, that all add up, which show progress. Life is really good right now and it's only going to get better, as long as I continue listening and responding to our creator and all our creator's creations.

It's such an amazing time to be alive, when you focus on nothing but the positives and fill your life with that energy. If you want the same outlook I'm going through, I can tell you what I'm doing and I'd love for you to be happy like me right now, because it's not just about me or my game, I want to see others progress just as much as me!

In a world, where we're all in it together, powered by one, I will support everyone in anyway I can.

A lot of people say that they'd like to be like a person they know, or a celebrity or role model they like.

For me, I've always been happy about who I am, I'm content with the person I am, I just want to be like myself.

However if I had to pick a person I wanted to aspire to be like, it would be like Mark Zuckerberg, the founder of Facebook, because I see that he is me, just in a different body, on the same planet. He may have a bigger community to connect with, he may have more than me, he may feel more accomplished in life, but we're still the same in the end, we still have the same core things in life, regardless who has less or more.

After all, we're all human in the end, we should aim to be ourselves, but look up to those role models we like and have good reasons for why we do. Ultimate happiness arrives when we challenge ourselves, become as good as we can be and always continue to progress forwards in life, with our family & friends.

In my history of delivering feedback, I also thought a lot about how the person thinks when they get my feedback and how I can do better when I give feedback.

Lessons I've learned include, telling them what I'd like to happen, rather than just pointing out the problem, we should also suggest what outcome they'd like. For example, I can't post a status, therefore I'd like to be able to post status, is a much more positive way of writing it, not just for me, but for the receiver too, lifting the mood, rather than just addressing the problem.

This recently also led me to think about when people say you can't do that, you can't do this. How about rephrase to, I can do it if I try or you can do it if you try or you can't do that, but you can do this. In a world where can is the attitude, when we say can't, we need to reinforce it with what we can do.

"To be able to focus on the things we can do. I'm very proud of myself, but more importantly I'm proud of our creator for giving me the feedback."

I'm making a game and I want you to be a part of the journey too! It's a community driven game called BattleRoyal.world and I'm already beginning to connect with the world community and do many great things! Now I want to connect with my community closer to home.

If you want to get involved, just tell me what skills you have, whether you do arts & crafts or into dancing, I believe everyone has a role in my community driven game! It's a really exciting time to be alive and in helping me with my game, you will be helping yourself progress further in your life & career.

I've already started looking closer to home and my nephew has helped kick start my vision of using Minecraft and my cousin @[100001416049994:2048:Prab] has helped on a send in your character campaign. It's just the start and there's so many people I'd like to connect with now, who I know need this opportunity! Lets do this together...

The actions and results of another member in life, influence our own. When a member succeeds or fails, so do we. We only succeed as a world, when everyone is succeeding at the same time. That's just the way it goes...

If we try our best as a world, we can do something no others before us have ever achieved. We may of gone to the moon, but our next challenge in the world, is world peace and a better world for us all. Lets do this together and enforce a successful world for us all to live in, because when we do that, then we succeed forever. We need to eradicate failure and the stigma attached to it and if you can't do something, then you can learn to do it or move on. Failure has no place on our planet, we can't afford to fail, we all must succeed in life.

In the most ever complex world, we can simplify, we can go back to basics, we can live with less, all in order to get a better quality and safer life.

We don't want to have to keep picking up the pieces to fix them, we can do everything right from the start and guarantee success for everyone, whatever they righteously want to do in life. We can do anything in these times, we can achieve anything. Lets leave this world with our heads held up high, knowing we left the best world ever and we did everything to make sure it worked right for everyone, for us, for our children, for our next life.

When I was doing my masters degree in Mobile App Development, one of my lecturers explained to us that everything must come with a reference in our Research & Methods module, because although you might know the knowledge, the knowledge actually came from an origin. He went on to explain that everything is recycled knowledge and if we can improve the knowledge with our own research, then we must reference it, then the cycle continues, where one day our knowledge will be reference and improved.

This explains every product we experience too. These ideas or products didn't just come from nothing, they came from research and the products before them and this cycle will continue to happen. When you see Facebook or Microsoft leading the way, it's all thanks to those before them, whether they get the recognition or not, it's just the cycle of life.

Not many people look much into it, they just think that this new company selling this new product was the first and they don't tend to think about the knowledge that came before, to make their product happen. In essence, everything in this world was used, copied and improved and that's the way we advance forwards, to get better products, better services and better knowledge.

This time in history is the best time in living history, regardless what anyone is told or thinks. If anyone can remember the real world before this time, the world was in a state of chaos, it breached breaking point on many levels for our most hard working people to our most deprived people in society.

It has enabled people to connect closer to their families, it has enabled the world to think about one another more, it has brought the world closer together, closer to the people that matter to them. This time in history has enabled us to stop for a moment and realise what we need to do to make the world better with the rules we must follow.

There are some pitfalls during this time, from our key workers having to do more work to our teenagers & younger adults getting involved in things they shouldn't be doing, such as taking drugs, drinking more etc and breaking the rules. Despite that, the damage caused from the pitfalls will be outweighed by the benefits that come from this time as we transition back to normal times.

However, what does normal times actually mean. It means going back to the very same world we had operational before these times, back to a world in a state of chaos, which never had time to stop and see how it could correct the world and times.

So one of two things will definitely happen. One is that the world returns back to how it was before this time, where nothing really changes and we've got strict policies in place relating to these times. Or two, the world transitions with better practices, the world corrects all the problems from the past, the world prepares for a better future as one world, which is more sustainable, more safer, more at peace with itself. Either way, it's the world's choice and we'll see what happens, but our creator gave us this time in history, to think about it, to prepare for the future, to put a better future into practice.

"People think that their history on Facebook is online forever, for the entire history of mankind and that our data, posts, photos and videos will be here whatever happens, even if they have their memorialisation setting turned on. However Facebook should be identifying closure of their business as a risk, to both themselves and the many people who've documented their history."

A while ago, I came up with a solution to a very big problem at Facebook and submitted it to them, which was to do with namespace and how Facebook need to prepare today, to ensure future generations have fresh namespace, the Facebook network keeps running and to ensure Facebook is future proof for the next 100 or 1000 years, because people in the future, will want new namespace and they will go to new networks and these new networks will become the next Facebook's and Facebook could ultimately be shutdown like MySpace and everyone's history will be gone forever.

The solution is as followed but updated with today's knowledge... Currently, Facebook connect our namespace to the domain Facebook.com, for example, www.facebook.com/MyName which can be tagged liked so @MyName. Therefore we've already consumed a lot of the namespace already and there needs to be new namespace for newer generations ahead, because people will keep their namespace forever, even after they've died.

Therefore the solution is very simple, we deploy new namespace options every 25 years for profile users only, where they can then use www.Facebook.com/+MyName and when they tag a person, all they have to do is @+MyName and every 25 years, the next new namespace, could be www.Facebook.com/*MyName and again you'd tag @*MyName.

I did have a more complex way before, which was to introduce a new domain for example www.Facebook.domain, which is part of the same network as www.Facebook.com, therefore you'd have two domains and new namespace on the new domain name. However, today I realised that I could just add a symbol to the namespace on the existing domain Facebook.com, to produce new namespace.

In addition, for businesses which can't use namespace from the original namespace, because maybe a person used their namespace or a business that no longer exists uses their namespace, then they can request for www.Facebook.com/+BusinessName and upon Facebook's approval, then they can use it.

This doesn't just help us, it helps future generations to feel a part of world history and guarantees our history remains online forever. People just think that Facebook is here forever and they take it for granted, however as Mark Zuckerberg even said, every 10 years, there's a new digital company or social network.

People might not see it as a big problem now and be satisfied with whatever namespace, but in 100 years time, there will be 2 billion or more memorialisation accounts, with no space for new accounts to use new namespace. Therefore this solution should be considered now.

This has to be one of the best pieces of feedback I've ever sent to Facebook out of the 1200 suggestions over the last 10 years.

Hey my name is Sunny and I've been following your campaign more or less since it started, watching various videos and doing research about your movement.

I've been suicidal over the years and more recently from November 2019 to February 2020 I've never felt so bad, which was emitting into my physical and social life, especially on Facebook.

However I used this time in history, to pick my gaming business off the shelf and start working on it, to put everything behind me, do something positive and focus on doing things with the community in a digital way. I've even done a special video to Heads Together for my gaming business which I think you'd like to watch.

My game is all about the community, it's more than a game, it's not going to just be a battle royal game, it's going to be an educational game where people learn life skills and use it as an engine to do better in life. Since March 2020, I've put in 100 hour weeks, I've connected with many people across the world, I've ran submit your drawings activities, I've had over 30 kids/adults help make our map with us in Minecraft, I've done my best to connect with the community and I've made a very positive impact.

I'd love to connect with you and open the door for you to help me on this journey in tackling mental health, in the gaming sphere, because it's amazing what you can do when you make a game, that aims on helping people.

Thanks for your time,
Sunny.

Protests are nonconstructive, there's better ways to resolve issues. Protests cause more harm than good in this modern era.

It shouldn't be #BlackLivesMatter
It should be #AllLivesMatter

This doesn't unite us, it divides us! It's doing the opposite, it's encouraging racism and divides. Most of the time, people just want something to do, people to meet, that's why lots of people go to protests. Injustice happens to people of all colours, but in the end, we come one. For the life of one, many can be lost in a protest versus constructive action that actually makes a difference.

Our creator assigned me
To protect everyone

No matter what, you will always have to respect our creator, you will always have to respect all life, you will always have to respect everyone. Through a world which seems divided and at war, in the end we are one world family and it's our job to work with one another, to ensure everyone gets the best protection and moves forward in life.

I do not need to wear a disguise, I do not need to hide, I will stand up for everyone and our creator will coat me in honour. Thus, infinitely protected. If anyone asks, I work for our creator, I work for myself, I work for everyone.

It's all about the schedule, so tomorrow I'm going to write a list of all the things I want to do every day and then make sure I do them throughout my days and years ahead.

Life can't and shouldn't always be about work, although it's good to be very career driven; life should always be about fun too. Even your work life can be just as fun, when you make the most of your career.

Balancing your work life from your lifestyle is the key to being more productive, where you feel more of a sense of progression, each and every day. Progressing throughout all of your life.

My list starts here...

- + Exercise
- + Socialising
- + Dining
- + Football
- + Games
- + Golfing
- + Camping
- + Fishing
- + Volunteering
- + Make music
- + Visit places
- + ...I'm going to be working on this list tomorrow to make sure I I'm in control of my life

If I'm going to make one of the world's next best gaming companies, I've got to make sure I've got a good schedule. When you start up a business, time is here and there and eventually the business can take over your life, where one can potentially lose sight of the world, whereas I want to make sure I don't and be the best founder I can be for this gaming company. Through putting my lifestyle first, I'm going to do a lot better in the gaming business.

I'm more than likely going to work out of hours at times, but that's normal when you're in the start up phase of building a company. Eventually I will have a more optimum schedule, which is the key, to be more efficient, as a leader.

If you don't back Britain and it's people, then no one will. You've got to play your role, because our politicians and authorities have given up. When you see the cracks, the mistakes and carelessness from parliament, then you know it's time to do something that will ensure we never break again, as a nation and people.

Britain was all about saving the world, yet the world tried to break us. We will not stand for any cartel play on our streets; we will eradicate all bad actors and wipe them off the face of the earth, because now we know, some want that gangland life forever, they don't deserve 10 chances, they deserve to be dealt with in the most brutal way possible, until they walk away from that gang life or be written off.

When ordinary, good and hardworking people are compromised by gang life, that's when it's time to get rid of all the bad actors on our streets and we should scheme on them, like they schemed on us..

@[235038350781686:274:Chan Zuckerberg Initiative] are you with me? I want to tell you all about the great things it aims on achieving and how community will always power it.

When you realise what you can do with a game, you can incorporate educational elements, you can bring language, maths & science into the game, you can make it more of an experience and help save our world.

Facebook have to get behind me on this gaming community, because it's literally going to change our world and it would be good to have Mark as a mentor, who already has lots of experience in running the world's biggest community.

Although I need money, I don't need money, I need people & support.

The reason why America rule the world, is because of their ability to innovate in programming. It's very simple, if you control how the world programs, then you have more influence over it and see better opportunities to get ahead.

From designing web applications to building games, we heavily rely on American technology and without it, we'd have to make our own from scratch, which could potentially take many years.

It changes the way our product and services markets work, it affects the way companies are taken over, it impacts innovation in communities.

Changing a few algorithms can ultimately change the way every business operates and they will have to adapt accordingly. In an open source world, we expect positive impact, but if we leave it all to the Americans, then our industries can not compete or innovate.

The American people actually get support in the digital sphere to innovate, from an educational view point, right up to the way businesses support each others technologies. I'm not saying it's a bad thing, because we've gained a lot, but it will certainly affect every other country in the world and American services will eventually take over, which we see today.

#BlackLivesMatter
#WhiteLivesMatter
#AllLivesMatter

All need to be rebranded to #MinoritiesMatters, because in India for example, #WhiteLivesMatter and in the United Kingdom #BrownLivesMatter etc...

The world is playing a PR stunt and businesses are following the crowd. It could never be resolved, unless we address it in this manner. It's all common sense when you think about it. #MinoritiesMatter

Then businesses or governments who are offering support, can use various factors to understand why you are a minority in your country, to give you better support. It's not just about colour, there are many other factors involved too; #MinoritiesMatter is the umbrella to many injustices or inequalities.

UK government do you want to support our gaming community The Data Driven Game Company which plans on giving people of all ages, opportunities into volunteering and work.

Our gaming community is willing to hire 30,000 16-24 year old's in Britain with a 6 month work from home digital career, part of the UK Government Kickstart Scheme. It will cost approximately £200m from the £2b fund and be fully in action by the end of September.

People can expect £5,330 for 25 hours a week over 6 months. An innovative web platform, will feature learning and activities to help them learn new skills and get involved in tasks which help our gaming community.

If you want to support us, then get in touch. When people feel part of a community like ours, then they want to work and play a role. There's so much to do. We can't do this without your financial support and you can not do this without us, your people.

It's not about our gaming community, we want people to learn skills and be in a better position to secure work in other companies too. After this period, we will hire some placements to continue working with us and we will also ensure everyone has built a digital portfolio in the 6 months, to increase their chances of securing employment.

Our game is going to be one of the biggest gaming communities in the world. It's straight forwards.

Heads Together are you with us? We can't afford to do nothing. This will be one of the biggest investments in British history, I promise; you will see. I'd like to talk to Prince Harry.

It also extends Britain with 15,000 paid opportunities for people around the world with weak currencies who are in need of opportunities.

We worked from the moment COVID-19 started and made great progress over the first 100 days! In recent days, we've struggled to raise finance and get enough volunteers in, therefore we need urgent support.

Whether it's financial support, grants or resources, we need to keep moving, otherwise Britain's next best gaming community might not make it.

To date, I've invested over £1,000 and 1000 hours and have a lot to show for it. It's just the start and our country and wider world will benefit from our presence, from learning new skills to having an opportunity they desperately seek..

It's not going to be enough to just support us through this time with our basic needs, we need support into better working lives, with better working hours and better opportunities, now & into the future.

We're not here to survive, we're here to thrive and support must be given. People need to feel in control of work, not to be controlled by work. When people are given opportunities and are provided with the necessary support, then society does well overall.

If we don't get creative, if we don't innovate, if we don't try, then the consequences are simple.

We can't act like we want to help support our NHS, if we don't start making the right moves right now; not just in our country, but around the world too.

Time; we took their time before this crisis and now we're taking even more of their time during this crisis, and we will more than likely after the crisis.

It's time this government starts looking at the entire care system, starts allocating better working hours, starts making more opportunities and starts addressing and solving previous problems outlined by doctors, nurses & management before this time. Everything must be tackled at the same time in health, we can't let this crisis misguide & distract us from our actual problems.

To all the key workers in every country right now, working conditions must improve everywhere, not just for the patients. but for the workers too. With more flexibility to be a key worker and potentially be ready for a changing career landscape.

Only the government can provide reassurance and action. It's up to us, to stand up, outline and request for better ways.

A few days ago on the 26th December 2020, I decided that it would be a good idea to help people get into writing and start writing their first book. As the year transitions to 2021, I believe it's time for us all to write a new book, a new future, a new way forwards, bringing the good with us.

Usually people don't know where to start and although people would love to write their own book, they never get round to actually doing it. Therefore I decided that it would be a good idea to develop a book template, to help get you started.

After talking to my mum about the idea on the 28th, I went ahead and made a physical prototype of the book template. That same evening, I began developing a digital version ready for print. Then on the 29th, I came up with a name 'ToMyBooks.com', kickstarted the Facebook page and today I ordered an author's copy of my book from Amazon, to see how it looks and prints.

It just shows, even through a year of crisis, you can still make a lot of progress, whether it is at the start of the year, in the middle or at the end; there's always time to turn things around or get involved in something that interests you.

It might seem a really simple thing to do, it might just look like a blank page when you get the book template, but what matters more, is what you put in your own book. It's a guide to get you going...

20 years in progressing
2020 the year of realisation
20/20 vision at 120 degrees

Now we can see it all, we can see how far we've come, we can see where we are and we can see where we are going. We can see what we don't want and what we do want. We can see who is really there for us. We can see what matters the most.

We made just as much progress in the last 20 years versus the 2000 years that came before us, yet we never would of been where we are, if it wasn't for the 2000 years of progress.

To new days ahead, to new year's ahead, to new futures ahead... Lets take the good from the last 20 with us into 2021 and look forwards to better life & work security... I believe we can make just as much progress in 2021 over the last 2020 years, if we really work together...

The world wants you all to itself, just like some people want you all to themselves. You've got to break free, moderate your life and make time for everyone who matters in your life and you will live a more fulfilling life; not being tied to a single person, a group of friends or a number of circles.

You see that when you're growing up early on in life, but as we get older, it's easy and it seems like the normal thing to do by restricting ourselves. The work is within our own actions and we must seek a more broader outlook to life.

By being too comfortable in life can potentially restrict our ability to grow, into the person we really deserve to be. It's not by fault, it's by survival, in why we home in on a more comfortable life, because maybe we want to be safer, maybe we want to be easier to manage, maybe we want to be settled, yet we can still have that, if we see that the world or anyone doesn't own us and we are fully in control of ourselves.

We are free to be the best person we really want to be. To 2021, where we can spread our wings and really fly. It all starts within and the little changes will make the difference.

Over the last couple of years, I've been tuning my news feed, from the things I want to see to the things that don't interest me. It is such an awesome news feed and I get to see the people who've always been in my life, I get to see the celebrities and businesses who inspire me and I get to see posts relating to my interests more. I've gone as far as controlling the adverts that don't interest me, by hiding them as soon as I want, to improve my advertising experience as I navigate my news feed.

Now I'm sorry if I've intruded on your news feed for any of my sensitive posts or videos over the last year, I really am. I wish I had better ways to express myself, but I realised it was the only way I could express myself, even if I didn't like the posts or videos myself, I had to document them and feel like I was being heard, even though I didn't want my friends and family seeing them posts and videos too. In recent months, I've advised friends to unfollow me for now, until I get my life fully sorted.

I still recommend avoiding my posts from December 2020, however beyond them posts which you should never have to see, there's more beyond them, there's some really inspirational posts, there's some really spiritual styled posts, there's a really good role model underneath the surface.

I can only promise that I will not do any more posts like that, because I've done them, I'm not deleting them like I did in the past, therefore I don't have to repeat them sometime in the future, which explains why I've always come back round to expressing myself again, month after month.

Whatever happens and however hard it is to understand, I want you to know that you're in control of your news feed and that we should expect more people like me to express themselves, from now on and into the future. They may well just be as sensitive as I was, however underneath it all, they just want the world to know, not their friends and family. Rather than judging, we should be respecting them for standing up against the world and support them.

It feels a privilege to be one of the first ~20 million users at facebook. Now I've got to make sure I always be a good role model on the network. Thank you to Facebook for 13 years on Facebook, even if it means having a more expressive world; we wouldn't ask for it any different. We will all find ourselves and improve as we progress through the years, given a little time.

I had one of the best dreams in my life last night, where I got to meet our queen, with a friend and walk around my home town, which I love so much. We was like three agents, going with the flow.

I remember talking about how much I love my home town to her and walking through town and the beautiful greenery near the river gardens. It lasted longer than other dreams I've ever had and it felt like she had come to meet me, because I had 5 minutes of her time which lasted half an hour, to explain myself, in how I want to help our world.

I've written posts in the past about how much I love our queen and more recently that I'd love to meet her, because now I've got purpose and I think she'd love to know what I have planned, for my future, for our country's future and for our world's future. Therefore, I see why we eventually connected in this magical way.

Now I can say I've met Bill Gates, Steve Jobs, Mark Zuckerberg and now The Queen in my dreams in this similar kind of way. I guess they say we are in power of our dreams and we make them through our positivity and hopefulness.

To 2026, I hope our creator can give our queen 100 years of happiness, humbleness and hope. We should always be thankful for such a remarkable lady who has helped us all realise our world and made it safer for everyone.

They say stick to one role, one pathway, one industry for a reason. Not just because you will be better at what you do, but because we must ensure that there are plenty of opportunities for everyone else.

If we go on the path the world is going on now, where we do multiple professions and want to become the ultimate business owner, then we make it harder for others to succeed and we also reduce our quality of work.

Ultimately in the long run, if we stick to one role, then we will become even better at them and the products and services we use will also be even better, because they are being powered by people who are dedicated to that particular role.

We must still feel like we are universal, where we can do any role with ease, because that's how we've been brought up and there are many great benefits, to being able to switch role, especially in our personal lives.

I really find it hard to digest, because I know the world is heading towards having multiple roles, where it's even more competitive, where your typical business owner is in 100 different industries and where the typical person on the street has 3 different job roles in 3 different industries.

I believe variety is key in the future, such as having 2 or 3 different roles in the same industry, but only if opportunities are in abundance for everyone else and your quality of service is just as good as a dedicated employee. It's going to be a juggling act and we must start talking and thinking about it all now, because there will be challenging times ahead and we've got to make sure we give everyone a role in our world.

Klangkarussell - Sonnentanz (feat. Will Heard) [Sun Don't Shine]

Every lyric must empower you, lift you and make you.

Example:

"From the shadow to the light, I'm here with you tonight." - It must be visualising. Each lyric must paint a positive picture in your mind.

I went 20 odd years listening to uplifting positive music and over the last 10 years, the entire music industry has changed so dramatically. It's time to go back to them uplifting times.

Start your day with some positive dance music to get you going and you will go through the days ahead thinking of positive lyrics.

Also check the benefits of gelatin and aim for superfoods. Feel energised in the mind, take adequate rest when needed, go for daily walks/jogs to revitalise yourself, use knowledge at every second of your life to your advantage.

Now I've given you the pet talk, I've got to do it myself. Just need some more money in the bank 😊 and aim to be more efficient than how I'm living now. Think of our impact to earth and if your input/work gives back to society, then you deserve to eat well and do better.

I'm sure most of us try and work back for society. Therefore we all deserve good food. In turn, better thinking, better stability, better actions and better society. They say you are what you eat. God forgive me if I've not been eating well, I'm always trying to be a better person.

From my personal perspective in life, I'm in the best position I've ever been in life, I've seen where I've made mistakes, I've seen where I've done good and I've seen where I need to improve. I've always tried to handle things as soon as I can, so they never persist.

We can't do all the changes in one go, but it's possible and I feel like after 7 years, I've finally got to where I really need to be, I know myself better than ever and I've weeded out the bad roots, as I've gone through experiencing life.

The truth is, that we are all at different stages in life and we find it hard to walk away from people or habits that aren't good for us. Nevertheless, if we make them small steps, eventually we get to where we need to be.

If you feel that this resonates with you, then I'd recommend doing it all in one go, because then at least, you don't have to do it over 7 years and you can start writing your new book with each chapter, just how you really want it to be. You're lucky to use this time in history, to take a step back, to use it to your advantage and to put your entire life back in the best order, not just for yourself, but for your family and good intentional friends, including our creator, who will always want the best for you, regardless what you are going through.

Good luck and all the best!

I back everyone in this world for the position they have to play right now, as much as I agree or disagree with them, I challenge them to get into a better position, not for themselves, but for humanity.

The world needs us all to be leaders, not followers. When we all lead one another in the right direction, humanity does better. It's what our children deserve, the best future, where we use knowledge to our advantage.

I believe most people can settle with nothing and then just take what they actually need, not what they want. It will be a balancing act, between a communist and capitalist type of world, where we can all succeed together and always appreciate one another, regardless of history, divides and our different ways.

Most people work for themselves, not our world, because the world has taught them to put themselves first.

I'm a smart man, always have been and if I wanted to work for myself rather than for the world, I'd have securities in life, I'd have a little money to do what I need to do in life and I'd be in a completely different position in life compared to where I am now.

I personally believe, if we all work for our world rather than ourselves, we will feel better inside, we will feel like we belong in society and the world will generally do a lot better.

My journey is far from complete, however I feel like I've made significant progress over the years, I've made an impact, I've changed the way we look at our world, I've tried to do things and I've succeed on many levels, even if it doesn't look like it.

To a world, where we all become leaders, where we all belong in society, where we all succeed together. We're 99.9% there, we just need to cross the final hurdle and I know we can do it, where humanity feels like we've finally done it and we can prosper further, for our creator of all matter.

Most people have a digital profile, whether it is a work or lifestyle based profile, the way I see it, everyone's profile is priceless and unique to themselves and our world.

When I look at my digital profile & presence; if I had to put a price on it, I'd say it'd be worth a billion pounds in today's times, in a world where there are nearly 3000 billionaires, 52m millionaires and 500m people with wealth of over $100k.

If you went through every digital asset of mine, then you'd understand, whether you agree or not. I've been trying to shape my profile for our world, not myself. I've already had the typical social media lifestyle profile, but in recent years, I've been working to build a work styled digital profile, hence why my profile doesn't look so successful, yet it is successful on many other levels.

I'm content, that I'm making good progress and it's not about the worth, it's about what I write and the actions I do.

After watching Yuri Bezmenov's videos, I stumbled across this man Vladimir Pozner and eventually a man in the audience asks the goliath of all questions humanity seeks to understand and solve, which in summary is, how do you stop people killing one another over nothing, as it appears.

In reality it's not the smartest question, but it's a question smart minds continuously ask themselves, when they hear about atrocities. In the end, anyone should be able to answer this question and indeed people have answered this important question for many millennia's, but as Vladimir states, it's not the question people are asking, because they are asking other less important questions, hence why people are still killing each other.

Vladimir, then answers with that people should speak out; that it's our human duty to do this and use our voice in a constructive way. We even have leaders such as Mark Zuckerberg mentioning that we should use our voice to bring community closer together, to come together and resolve our differences, the founder of the biggest community in the world. We now see people are beginning to turn up on the world's biggest stage in recent years to use their voice. Therefore, we must also ask, are their voices really being heard, is any good actually coming from them stepping up, is the question to vague to answer.

Clearly, if you're smart, you'd say the obvious answer, which is to educate and have good opportunities in life. That's all we can do and that should be enough, if we do it right; but as we know, the world doesn't always do it right and history is hard to let go. Therefore if anyone does wrong, it must be addressed, resolved and accepted, in order to move on, we can't pick sides, we can't favour our own, we can't allow for anymore bad to happen.

It's such a deflected question, because it seems as if other questions or viewpoints are more important, yet we need to bring it back to the forefront, begin using our voices, set a solid standard for society and accept if people do wrong, then correction must be in order, whoever they are, however much money they have, whatever they've done. However if we can better educate and provide opportunities to everyone in our world, then in the future, we will not have to ask this question and the world will generally become a better place.

Doesn't it show, everything balls down to education and being able to use our voices. We might be at different stages in life, but together we can achieve our toughest challenges and work in harmony of one another, despite our past and our differences.

@[170911309781648:274:Veganuary] can we really save the planet by becoming vegans or is it a myth?

For eggs and milk for example, we rely on animals and typically speaking, if we choose the alternatives, the protein and calcium isn't as affective. I believe we typically eat meat these days, because it has become a by product in a vegan world. There are many other animals we rely on these days, for the vast amount of food products in the market.

Therefore isn't it impossible to become vegan and doesn't interrupting our food cycle, then affect our body in new ways? Just like with a baby, if you change their food cycle, it affects their growth, etc...

Do you not think your campaign is causing more harm than good? Lots of good questions for you to ask. Maybe you should suggest incremental changes over time, rather than stunning the body in one month. In health, they say steadily make changes.

I think it's time to work for Vladimir Putin...

If the Russian state is looking for a diplomatic peacemaker, then I'm willing to work for the Russian people, to help our world, progress together, in the name of all of our world's country's, not just one country.

I can help establish links, express the new Russia, solve problems, break down bureaucracy, reverse years of damage, encourage better business relations and more importantly make Russia the world number one superpower, where every other country will follow suit immediately and indefinitely respect Russia, regardless of the political future.

The amount I can put on the table in 24 hours, aren't I worth listening to? Aren't I worth a plane ticket to Moscow? Aren't I worth a punt? It's not about me, it's not about Russia, it's about a world that works together. I'm just a real small guy in society, but aren't the small guys in society, who make the biggest impact?

I see an isolated Russia without people like me and I don't like that prospect in any shape or form. The world deserves better...

In the future, our social media profiles will be more defined by tags, whether its lifestyle or work and we will conform to having profiles like that of Mark Zuckerberg and the typical person like myself.

As I shifted to more a work style profile, I need to continue working on my lifestyle aspects too, because there has to be a healthy balance between the two.

My profile may look like a million dollars, but I've been posting things I wouldn't normally post, posts which this world drove me to post, posts which I never wanted anyone to see. It's still not perfect, but like our world, imperfection is the beautiful thing about our world, just like our people and their views.

Of course I'm sorry and I feel indebted to you, for being subject to my posts, which normally get censored by myself after a day, a week or a month. I've been doing my best to censor myself, whilst respecting a world which supports freedom of speech. I might not always get it right, I might not say things constructively, but I always aim to get there in the end, whilst trying to respect the 7.85 billion people I will have to live with either way.

My point is, if I can censor myself, so can you, because in the end, your Facebook profile, your posts, your views will be what will be left when our time is complete here on earth. It's how people will remember us. Regardless what we are going through, we must always aim to be nice beings and constructively get there in the end, for everyone's sake.

When I do become a millionaire, I plan on giving back, whether that is time, a helping hand in the right direction, contacts to the best people around me, or even a little money, I will do my best to do that. Right now, I can't do that, but what I've got, is worth far more than money. It's the least I can do, for being subject to my posts over the last dramatic year in my life on social media.

I believe we can all turn it around, be respected by everyone and go where we righteously intend in life. To a world of leaders, where we all learn and lead with one another, regardless of experience and skills. Our creator is powering us all; there is great knowledge to be taken from everyone around us, however young or old we are.

I've already experienced this a little in the past, from being homebound more, but in the past, I could change between scenery & settings, to refresh my mind and to detach them tough emotions from the place we do and should love the most, home.

It's so important, because we've got to do it for our health and the people around us, the people we love the most. I'm not saying don't let it out, I'm just saying handle it immediately, reassure the people around you and feel like you've moved on in an instance, considering you've done the most you can.

I speak on behalf of all the British people, for a better world.

Can we forgive our governments of the world, can we highlight our errors in the aim for correction, can we lift sanctions we should also be subject to, can we stop irrational measures which lack moral high grounds, can we sort the world's problems that led us into this crisis?

Because if we don't, many proxy wars, crises and tough times are inevitable for all our futures.

We deserve the best, every single one of us, regardless how good or bad we've been, regardless how far the system has taken us, regardless how divided we are.

We must reunite and always remember this; not just a saying that we're in this together as a world, but actually mean it and continuously back it up with action, sensible action, action that helps us all move on, together, in the right direction.

Because in the end, we all want the same things in life and we're not asking for a lot, we just want our basics, family, friends, a healthy working life, a balanced lifestyle and a sense of belongingness in our world community.

Yes it might seem that it's too late to turn things around and this usually prevents the world from correcting its wrongs, thinking they can no longer make a difference. It's this type of attitude that stalls the world and humanity.

Regardless how much one has lost, it is never too late to turn things around, it is never too late for correction, however much we've been done by the system, however far we've crossed the line, however much damage has been caused.

If we don't try, then we can never move on and typically speaking, problems manifest into more serious problems. Lots has to be done, it's not just about admitting liability for ones wrongs, but it's all about making sure correction is in order and that the ones who committed wrong are somewhat forgiven for being guided by a system designed to use them; not just to punish them and compensate the ones who've been done wrong; otherwise no one will ever admit liability for their role. Find a way forward for everyone.

We've already got the intelligence about this world, in our creator's name, in our creator's memory, in our creator's universe; we either try and correct everything, otherwise our creator will do it all for us, in mysterious ways.

Personally I prefer our creator taking charge and disrupting all them bad people who are not willing to change; but now humanity has a chance to take responsibility and aim for a better world. Because the inevitable is already happening; our creator is standing up for us good people, even if we can't see it, they can't escape the guilt, no matter how hard they try. Our creator will change their path in life for doing us wrong, forever.

There's easier ways forward in life, when you put it all on the table. The world has to change, now or never, because no one will want to correct their wrongs, if they're just going to go to jail, feel really punished by the system etc. A system where most bad people get away with inflicting damage and the few face the worst time in correction, that never actually corrects them.

We can't have one rule for one, another rule for the other. The bad world will be taken down indefinitely if we continue to do this. The anonymous world movement is here, where the majority of the world are standing up against the few, in retaliation, in aim of correction, for good people.

We're all recycling knowledge from one another. It's the circle of life. Until we test out our theories and until they're proven, new knowledge can't be formed. We may learn new things, but it's already knowledge known to humanity.

The more diverse we become, the more we learn, the more knowledge we gain. If we all followed the same direction, then it'd take much longer to gain new knowledge.

For the greats that explored, for the greats that wanted to test new theories, for the greats who were aiming to help humanity go beyond the horizon.

I believe we're all diverse people, where we all know different kinds of things and have different experience, however young or old we are. Therefore we've all got something to bring to the table and we should look to one another, to learn even more, to develop new knowledge and to share it with the world.

Our creator already knows us good hearted people very well. Therefore if our creator notices us being angry or upset, our creator knows it's not us, it's something to do with the world or the way it is treating us, as much as we don't want to experience these emotions.

Thankfully for people like me, people know me well, know I don't like to get angry, know I don't mean to hurt anyone, knows I will always try and do the right thing. But I sympathise for the ones who're aren't as fortunate as me, because they might not get the same sympathy or respect I get, when they turn into a monster.

If one does turn into a monster of anger, it's so important to not take it out on the people around you, because it's only them who will really understand you and what you're going through and will always be there for you.

Our creator can't enforce correction, but our creator will do everything to make sure the right thing is done in the end. We can't expect for instant results, but eventually the good will prevail for us people who've been good all our lives!

I believe we need a clearer picture of government spending, now and into the future, especially during these times. We should know absolutely everything, if we want to move forwards as a country. There's already some base information, but we should know it all, if they want to tax us all.

In an open world, governments should publish information on a daily basis and hide nothing. I thought we live in democracy. We should have this information by now, in this digital age.

Not just government spending, but local spending too.

Feedback from Sunnyfacebook.com

Over 10 years of delivering feedback to companies, I've decided to setup a Facebook page called @[103789365045256:274:Feedback from Sunny] where I will spend a few hours a week, looking for problems, thinking of solutions and contacting organisations around the world.

I'm going to use this page to document my feedback, tag companies and help shape our future. We all have a role to play... Follow my page if you're interested.

It's only the ones who never start, it's only the ones who never try, it's only the ones who never keep going, who never really know what they're going to get or know where they'll be in the very near future.

Your expectations might not always be fulfilled, it might not all happen in one go, it might not always go according to plan, but if you keep moving in the right direction, eventually you will see and each day will be a indicator of your progress made.

Take those all important small steps, plan well, look after yourself & the people who matter most to you and it will all work out just great!

Either way, I don't mind if you support me or not, but it'd help and I will endless try, even fail, get back up, continue. Once you support me, you will never regret it. The best work is always yet to of been done.

'They' must think we were born yesterday, but infact we were all born at the start of all existence; we formed at the beginning of all time. We were planned, right from the get go.

The universe represents the computing world that we are familiar with today; we live in a digital universe, formed by many variables, many if statements, many then statements, many strands of code. We are the output from an input which will always be a mysterious force, where we will always seek to question, seek to study, seek to continue.

Without the light, without the dark, without the energy emitting in all directions, we can not form. Every single factor, far or close, contributed to the development of us and everything we see, hear, feel or experience.

If we want to support ourselves, then we should be supporting the ones who are going to help improve the world, rather than the ones who are just out for themselves. It just makes sense... It sets a very high standard... The future should be now... We can't just hear it, we've got to see it, for all of us...

These times have allowed us to test ourselves, like judgement day came early and we get to look at ourselves, prepare ourselves, improve ourselves and better ourselves as one humanity. It has given the ones who've been going through tough times in the past a little break even if it's not a break they are looking for, it has given the ones who've been hanging around with people who don't really care about them the chance to step away and spend time with their family who really matter, it has given the ones who've been getting up to no good the opportunity to correct themselves.

For the ones who've kept working, for the ones who've worked tirelessly, for the ones who've been always doing this for our world, keep strong and better days are ahead, because you will get a better break than what we all had very soon.

If you're at home, sitting around, doing not a great deal, then I'd recommend keep learning, discover opportunities and work on your future, because there's lots of great things in store for us all, regardless what you're going through. Keep positive, listen to positivity, fulfill yourself in nothing but positivity. It will all work out, I promise. Keep praying to our creator once a day if you can, our universe is still listening to us all and always wants the best for all life.

If you can do the work safely without them asking you to, then eventually they might pay you. In the scarce job landscape, you have to do it if it interests you, volunteer a bit and not do it for the money.

Not only will you help yourself, you will eventually help your country. Even if the government can't pay you to do the job you want to do, you at least try and if nothing comes from it, at least you can gain new experience and add it to your portfolio or CV.

Although there is not many paid opportunities right now, there are still many opportunities to work, whether you can dedicate 1, 5 or 20 hours a week. Working from home is the future and it might all start there during these times.

► All about Apple: ● Apple net income for the quarter ending December 31, 2020 was $28.755B, a 29.32% increase year-over-year. ● Apple net income for the twelve months ending December 31, 2020 was $63.930B, a 11.13% increase year-over-year. ● Apple annual net income for 2020 was $57.411B, a 3.9% increase from 2019. ● Apple annual net income for 2019 was $55.256B, a 7.18% decline from 2018. ● Apple annual net income for 2018 was $59.531B, a 23.12% increase from 2017. Apple, the home of Steve Jobs, the pioneer who made them and without him, Apple never would of come back from the dead and instead it would of been called Next, where you would be buying your Next iPhone at Next.com, which are now owned by Apple, thanks to Steve Jobs. Not only are their pioneers in mobile devices, creative machines or OS's but they excell in the media, film & TV industry, where they've been advancing at an alarming rate in recent years. Although they are the most valuable company in the world, I firmly believe their market capitalisation should be somewhat below that of Microsoft, only because most people don't get to experience their flagship products; nevertheless most of us indirectly experience Apple through their media divisions, unknowingly. I would say Apple should be worth $1.8 trillion in today's rigged climate. But if we had the possiblity of unrigging the system and basing Apple, Amazon, Facebook, Google, Microsoft & Tesla on my expectations of each company in a fairer and more realistic world, then I'd say each company should be based at 40% of them, where Apple is worth $720 billion (40% of $1.8 trillion & so forth for each company) ► All about Microsoft: ● Microsoft net income for the quarter ending December 31, 2020 was $15.463B, a 32.74% increase year-over-year. ● Microsoft net income for the twelve months ending December 31, 2020 was $51.310B, a 15.76% increase year-over-year. ● Microsoft annual net income for 2020 was $44.281B, a 12.85% increase from 2019. ● Microsoft annual net income for 2019 was $39.24B, a 136.8% increase from 2018. ● Microsoft annual net income for 2018 was $16.571B, a 34.99% decline from 2017. If there was one company that finally got what it deserved, it was Microsoft, an undisputed heavy weight, that adapted, changed its ways and put the things which really work at the heart of its company. They may of failed in mobile as my lecturer used to joke with me about, but they've excelled in new areas, such as quatum, learning, AI and their service & software driven plan has finally paid off after 5-10 years on a bumpy road. Their market capital is representative of the industries they thrive in and arguably should be worth more than that of Apple. They still maintain the server backbone of most companies and are the number one choice when it comes to PC's or Laptops, which help most of us do our work on and provide the platform for digital services to thrive on. Rather than competing with Google, they've decided to build upon their services on Android. ► All about Amazon: ● Amazon net income for the quarter ending September 30, 2020 was $6.331B, a 196.67% increase year-over-year. ● Amazon net income for the twelve months ending September 30, 2020 was $17.377B, a 53.14% increase year-over-year. ● Amazon annual net income for 2019 was $11.588B, a 15.04% increase from 2018. ● Amazon annual net income for 2018 was $10.073B, a 232.11% increase from 2017. ● Amazon annual net income for 2017 was $3.033B, a 27.92% increase from 2016. Well Amazon, clearly have had a long term plan of reinvesting most of their profit each year. I'm surprised to see them at $1.7 trillion, but with their online ecommerce system really ramping up over recent years, they've changed the way we shop, not just the way we read. Amazon sit in the market pretty fairly, without a computing language under their belt. Nevertheless, they are aiming to be in every industry like the rest of the big tech companies and are piloting many different schemes at a faster rate than most; Google took this pathway once upon a time, but it made them spread themselves too thin, therefore Amazon must avoid this issue and focus on the areas that make their brand, but still continue to innovate, in new tech, in better ways. ► All about Google: ● Alphabet net income for the quarter ending September 30, 2020 was $11.247B, a 59.13% increase year-over-year. ● Alphabet net income for the twelve months ending September 30, 2020 was $35.713B, a 9.48% increase year-over-year. ● Alphabet annual net income for 2019 was $34.343B, a 11.74% increase from 2018. ● Alphabet annual net income for 2018 was $30.736B, a 142.74% increase from 2017. ● Alphabet annual net income for 2017 was $12.662B, a 34.99% decline from 2016. Google, also now known as Alphabet, who own 70% of the mobile phone market, who are a monopoly in search and still a very big player in the video market with YouTube. The hardware industry has been their push over the last 5-10 years and they may follow Microsoft's path again, by exiting this market one day soon and becoming more service & software driven. I personally seen that they were just as big as Microsoft and Apple and they were fighting back and forth over the last couple of years in terms of market capitalisation. I would expect them to double in market cap over the next year, if Apple and Microsoft maintain their $2 trillion market cap. ► All about Facebook: ● Facebook net income for the quarter ending December 31, 2020 was $11.220B, a 52.67% increase year-over-year. ● Facebook net income for the twelve months ending December 31, 2020 was $29.146B, a 57.67% increase year-over-year. ● Facebook annual net income for 2020 was $29.146B, a 57.67% increase from 2019. ● Facebook annual net income for 2019 was $18.485B, a 16.4% decline from 2018. ● Facebook annual net income for 2018 was $22.111B, a 38.89% increase from 2017. What do I say about Facebook?! Well, they've finally managed to get moving over the last 5 years and I've been checking their share prices over the last 10 years, in addition to the amount of employees they have, in the hope of working their one day, also backing and supporting them all the way, in the name of 'freedom of speech', going against all the naysayers. I personally believe they should be worth $1.5 trillion in a market where they are far more important than Apple and Microsoft combined, although their success is thanks to them. Furthermore, they are taking a big leap into video and will one day take over YouTube. ► All about Tesla: ● Tesla net income for the quarter ending December 31, 2020 was $0.270B, a 138.94% increase year-over-year. ● Tesla net income for the twelve months ending December 31, 2020 was $690M, a 180.05% decline year-over-year. ● Tesla annual net income for 2020 was $0B, a 100% decline from 2019. ● Tesla annual net income for 2019 was $-0.862B, a 11.68% decline from 2018. ● Tesla annual net income for 2018 was $-0.976B, a 50.25% decline from 2017. Let me note that Tesla deserve their share price, not because of the investors who are backing them and want to profit from the electronics company, but because they changed the perception of electronic vehicles, where other manufacturers made unattractive attempts in this field, all in the interest of burning more oil. Although their net income is relatively low, they are the only dedicated electronics car company on the center stage and are excelling in battery solutions for the home & beyond. In today's climax, I'd argue they are worth $1 trillion, if Apple is allowed to be worth $2.4 trillion; however this is hyper inflating company over company talk, not based on the numbers, but based on their move to a greener world.

► All about Apple:

You've got to imagine that there is a hundred other people round the corner who are just like you. Could you live with them, could you support them, could you thrive with them. If you can then it means you're heading in the right direction and if not, then it means you've got changes to make. That's how this world works, based on role models, based on the standards we set and based on being the best we can.

Most problems in life are usually psychocological, therefore if you disconnect from any trains of thoughts and let your mind do what it is suppose to, then nothing can affect you: you can use your mind to heal yourself and you can do what you need to do. Focusing on the desired outcome will get you there. Just do the absolute bare minimum and your mind will look after you.

It's like when you are doing something, if you're thinking about it or talking about it whilst you're doing it, you're not going to do it as well, but before you start doing it, you need to know how to do it and then whilst you're doing it, you need to monitor what you're doing and adjust accordingly, without a thought.

It's all about positive energy and continuing in working on yourself.

A real founder is prepared to do 40 x1 hour jobs in a week, from being the post man to the doctor, from being the nurse to the bin man, from being the teacher to the local shopkeeper, just to get everything done.

That's the real founder, that's you in disguise; because you have to do a hundred things everyday to make sure you get to do the things you want to do in life.

We're all a founder in one way or another, founding ourselves, founding our work ethics and founding our place in this world.

Crisis is a constant and we are always doing everything we can to handle it. If you didn't know this before the pandemic, it should be a lot clearer to you now and you should now be able to get through any crisis ahead, knowing this knowledge.

You've got through the financial crash in 2008, you've got through the 2012 end of the world misinformation war, you got through years of political fallout and now you've got through this pandemic.

This crisis for creatives like me is a god sent in heaven, especially for the ones who didn't have work or were working towards their career goals. It gave us the ability to use our time, connect with community and creatively progress further.

When they say there's opportunity in crisis, it's a true statement and it doesn't just apply to the rich. Most people had the opportunity to work through this crisis and better their career prospects. Well done on you guys, your progress will be rewarded!

By the end of the month:

- > Spend the rest of the month organising all work commitments.
- > Finish ImTheStreamer Website Template to help people BecomeTheStreamer.
- > Work with my cousin Prab on ImTheStreamer and help him reach 1,000 new followers
- > Help a music teacher called Loue Marc from Derby with his Facebook strategy
- > Finalise the designer label I've recently setup with 10 other people and list 10 limited edition products for sale
- > Do some ground research and compile a list of companies to apply to
- .

The following month May 2021:

- > Work on the UIA community game, by getting people involved in coding our infrastructure. I will be make a work platform for volunteers to pick up jobs easily in our community and help make our game
- > List 100 limited edition exclusive designer clothing products
- > Design the Inflatior.com product concept in 3D
- > Prepare the clothing label web software to be deployable in a few other brand names I'm setting up this year, including for clients who want to pay me to use the software
- > Prepare a social media strategy for ImTheStreamer and begin engaging with people interested in streaming, helping them on their way
- > Prepare cover letters & apply to shortlisted companies
- .

June 2021:

- > Make some improvements to the website and push a campaign for helping people write their first book through ToMyBooks.com
- > Continue to make and measure progress and align my work to pay me a sustainable wage

Later on in the year:

- > Setup a simple career portal
- > Can focus on Feedback From Sunny and occasionally outline feedback, continuing to look for work in this area
- > Can focus on earning money from having fun streaming games to live audiences across the world

Monday in the office is going to be very busy and it looks like I can only succeed. I will still need your support and I will help you where I can help you in the digital space.

If you don't ask, then you don't get, isn't that right Mr Speaker!

I petition to the @[408582579294175:274:UK government] to compensate all its citizens with £3,000 for the recent crisis and displacement in society. It will help everybody in the UK transition better and will only cost the UK Government £210 billion for 70m UK citizens. It will make a difference to everyone and it is a price that can be paid.

This is the only time in history such a deal could be struck, otherwise this would be an outrageous deal on the table. I even understand it's still a big ask, but our rich UK Government can just about easily afford this one. It will also provide a significant boost in the economy, which is key.

For people who worked creatively from home, they need this opportunity, to help them continue flourishing. We should be supporting their career prospects and ensuring they also have the ability to invest in their career.

Spend every penny wisely and £3,000 will go a very long way. Look to creative smart working, invest in your career, work where you want.

Sign the petition via https://petition.parliament.uk/petitions/583080/sponsors/new?token=OEZhkLXadMQwQk_IpJ0S

We can all end up transitioning, where we are all better off than before the pandemic. £3,000 may not sound like a lot of money, but it will go a long way and help relief financial stresses a bit, where people can then use the money to invest further into their career.

Mental Health Awareness

The government need to provide a year of relief for all people on UC, but ensure that all UC members get employment through support or have the option to work on a self employed basis, continuing any start-up businesses from the start of the recent pandemic, which helped power community or provide a role.

People who want to start a smart working business right now, should be given the chance to, where they should be given 6 months of relief time, so they can start working on their business. Through this, the government can also offer links to support and advice on smart working, whilst still applying for jobs.

The UK government should also excel in providing a world class digital career platform, where you belong in a system that wants to see you do better, where you can 1. Present yourself (templates/html) 2. Discover opportunities (filters) 3. Set the standards!

If we couldn't deliver a world class digital career service in 2020, then we should in 2021. I just thought the government would of worked on something innovative like this during the pandemic, but it appears not. It just shows no one in the government is driving the future of careers and that something needs to be done about it now, before we face the biggest ever career crisis!

...No one cares...

Web; Work; Stats

It's interesting to know that I setup my first test feedback website when there was around 125 million websites online in 2008, providing feedback to Opera and big tech. Now there are over 1500 million websites on the web.

Interestingly I came back to where I started in my web career, providing feedback and setting up feedback campaigns.

Now I'm doing much more than ever and capable of handling and working on different models. Having said this, I'm far from where I want to really be right now due to always running on a zero budget, but I'm far more prepared and look forward to getting all my work models up to date and then in 2022, help people start up their own business each day, signalling their plan, Facebook, website and work hub.

A few years ago, I said I will never ever set up another website or business model again, because I wasn't willing to do it without any finance.

So as I know now, that you can do all of this work pretty quickly and cheaply to get the results you exactly want, by designing a good business model. Either way, whether I get finance to do my work in life, I will be starting this work next year. I'm looking forward to spending a couple of days templating this daily schedule for next year.

You've got to do your dreams, you've got to work smarter, you've got to value time. I see the gains I will be getting by being involved.

The focus to people's problems isn't to do with their current problems, it's to do with the problem that made their current problems.

This is where the world gets everything wrong. It thinks it knows the problems to tackle, but if one never focuses on the root, then new problems arise, persist and take over the show, skewing the actual problem.

Updated 19 Aug 2021, 14:01

18 Aug 2021, 16:55

You can have control over social media, but it all starts with education, setting your limits, defining yourself and utilising on all things digital to meet your purpose in life. It's supposed to be a tool, not a problem maker.

You see, if you were told that you can have the best social media experience and it will be based around all your interests, lifestyle and work, then would you be inclined to have that journey?

I think the answer is yes for anyone, but escaping the very devices which help us advance forwards as a civilisation isn't an option, like removing chocolate from society for example. You can be addicted to anything in a figurative context, yet if you can not exercise the basics, such as moderation, control and order, then you may begin to have a problem with it.

It's about handling it, tuning your Facebook exactly how you want it, then at least every time you come back to check, you get to see the things you really want to see, from the people or influencers who matter most to you.

Most people have already had a spiritual awakening with the power of social media, they know it's important and they also know it's important to have ones safeguards in place.

It's about building credibility for each and everyone, so we can all excel in both life and work. That's part of Mark Zuckerberg's vision at Facebook, however that does not speak for the rest of the other social media apps, they fail to capture real identities!

Talking about identity, that starts before you interact with social media. That's something which you begin building, by second nature. The digital sphere is just an enhancement to that non digital environment. Indeed we must learn how to go a week, a month, a year without it, or at least be able to put our nuclear powered devices down more often and enjoy better life, activities and health.

If I was Facebook live all day, would it be easier to work with me? I'm going to demo it this year and prepare for a future that will rely on this way of work.

Of course it's not for everyone, but if it is of significance, then it's worth documenting your journey through our world and inspiring the next generation.

I can do 10+ hour days, outline daily notes, do tasks and become sustainable with a little financial support. I'm looking forward to making some simple overlays in OBD to use, to help make my daily videos feel progressive and professional.

Interestingly our constructs are pretty good at determining an environment or life. I believe that the major construct is our observable universe and we are an identical pattern to it, from the way we think to our ego playing a role. Without an ego, there is no position, there is no spin, there is no construct, there is no creator; life has limited means to become more, its a fundamental part of growth.

The only time you can remove your ego, is when you're analysing all matter in the pursuit of understanding ego, even then it can be seen to be an egotistic approach. Life depends on it to strengthen, whether it comes in the form of words, posture, etc. It's a word that describes our characteristics, characteristics that can't survive without ego.

To myself, it's just a word when you've conceded to all processes of our creator and feel in greater tune with our environment, wherever we go.

Even some of my friends and family told me to give up on the prospect of a job at Facebook, secret service and my digital work.

I never stopped working, I kept advancing, I kept documenting, i kept progressing.

To Mark Zuckerberg,

I wish you and your family a safe journey through life, regardless what we've been through and had to write on social media.

I'm sorry to you and all your staff who've been subject to the changing world and our damaged voices, I really am. It would of been easier in a voiceless era to the irony.

I'm not here to ask you for money, it's not what I ever wanted, it was work, it was purpose, it was belongingness; a place in Facebook where I could feel a part of something much bigger than myself and be able to connect with people based on my work and interests. Money aside, I can't work without backing and support.

Now I'm here, I just look like another lawsuit to pay out, but in actuality, I'm just like you. I'm in this community called Facebook, I've made a meaningful sub community inside Facebook like you subliminally suggested us to do in 2017 and more importantly see the importance of a Facebook future...

It's a collective effort and it's all underpinned from everyone who has contributed to this voiceful movement, on all previous and new platforms.

'From the meditation to the hum' for Russell Brand

There are many things you can do to improve your balance, posture and framework. From better breathing techniques to taking things at the right pace. Check out Russell Brand's page, he has some great content!

It's all about allowing yourself to feel at ease with yourself and your environment. It's about keeping things simple and understanding that we have the power to handle ourselves.

The more we can break down our lives into segments, the more we can manage, ultimately achieving our lifetime goals. It's easy and you've just got to do it and measure the progress everyday.

Ensure you are at one with yourself all the time and if you need 5 minutes to mediate, it should be welcome in every workplace in 2021.

Less is more...

5 Sep 2021, 23:51

Before watching, I believe it's a process we are all destined to experience, in how we handle ourselves and use thinking in mathematical or constructive ways.

You've got to know we've got this capability, but knowing it costs more energy, energy that should naturally converse to knowledge and benefit us; without thinking or trying much at all.

Fulfill your mind and be prepared to make a universe work, one way or another and be at peace with your silent invigorating environment.

If you're going to have a quick thought about something, then feel energised by it. Like Einstein said, if he has a thought, he may pursue it further... He didn't pursue all his thoughts... It just shows how he used to think...

Like less is more...

Second nature...

Intelligent...

To the UK government's future
5 million smart working careers
A small price to pay, a lot to gain
Lets pick up the shortfall now

£125,000,000,000 (125B)
5M x £25,000 Jobs

£50,000,000,000 (50B)
1K x £50,000,000 Work Centres

To start discussion...
To pilot a test model...
To build our future...

We'd just need to yield £125B in profit, which is representative ~ 1 in 20 of UK yearly GDP, where £50B of assets has risen to £250B, thanks to smart infrastructure proofing, furthermore £12.5B would be recouped by an internal discount pyramid scheme, 1,000,000 houses developed by 0.5m smart workers in turn turns a profit of £150B, amongst many other industries to tap into and support. It'll be important to recognise and support competition that suffer as an impact of the great changes, so it's a win win situation. It is time to use data to our advantage for once.

The UK has every right to become a £5T GDP economy by the end of 2023, if we really work on it, in a positive way, for all members in society.

Before it's too late...
Lets become the pioneers...

"We asked a number of jobs people wanted to do in a typical week and what we realised was that people had spread interests when it came to preference.

This also toned in on the fact that the future screams smarter working, where we do a number of jobs opposed to one, but have more control, flexibility and opportunity to thrive.

This will be the example, not just for Britain, but every other country. We should build our world working smarter, not harder."

That'd be sustainable for the next 10 years just off the back of building 1,000,000 houses a year, which our country so desperately needs, never mind allowing competition to still thrive, finding new land, like trying to find new money. This UK government likes privatisation, well there's plenty of flipping opportunities to build and sell.

At the end of the decade, the UK government will of added ~ £3T worth of new housing (1m houses), the initial infrastructure costing of £50B should of developed £500B of assets/cash aside, never mind all the other industries the work centres will be involved in. All money generated, will be used to sustain careers for everyone in the UK.

From being a burden 5 million, we could have 5 million creative individual opportunities for people who are not in work or are below the £25,000 safety net for Britain. Aside to this, the UC system should be entirely scrapped and be replaced by the work centre movement, which works for everyone. Built to the core...

To all family & friends, I've been going on a journey of a lifetime over the last year and I've made progress I would never imagine! It hasn't always been easy, but I've managed to get through it.

I couldn't of done it without you guys and I hope we've inspired one another, by just being there or through the things we've done together. I'd like to say sorry if I've not been my best through mental health, but everything is going in the right direction now. I'd like to give you my time in return, whether that's advice or just a quick chit chat! Just get in touch anytime, I really mean it!

And finally, If you watch the Earthshot Prize TV series and want to support us in our journey in making the best products in the world, that last us longer, are easier to clean and are more recyclable, then send us a donation via <https://www.justgiving.com/crowdfunding/uia> We're also going to be helping people around the world learn skills in game! How cool right!

Your share will go a long way, if you know someone who may be interested. All the best team! Keep progressing forwards...

I understand everyone is affected by mental health and it's important to have a good mental health. At times I've felt like I've not been able to express myself or I have extremely expressed myself, regardless of my journey. I'd like to say a big sorry to everyone, who has seen some of my posts, that did cross the line or had to hear about my story in the physical world. I'd like to say now, that there's always a way through, regardless what we are going through and that in return, I owe you my time at the very least, if you need that. Finally, I'm not going to be posting or using my Facebook profile for now, until Facebook provide the pin feature post for profiles, where this post, will be at the top for some time, so my previous sorries aren't whisked away.
